Sign Seaway Pact; Called Unfair

WATER TREATY CURBS CHICAGO CHANNEL FLOW

Senate Committee to Make Inquiry.

Criticize Treaty Here

Sanitary district officials say St. Lawrence seaway treaty imperils gulf waterway and call its limitation on Lake Michigan diversion unfair to the middle west. (Details on page 7).

(Picture on back page.)

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Arrangements for a sweeping investigation of the treaty providing for joint American-Canadian construction of the St. Lawrence seaway for navigation and power were completed today within a few hours after diplomatic representatives of the two nations formally had signed the new pact.

In announcing an early inquiry into the terms of the treaty which provides for connecting the great lakes and the Atlantic by a 27 foot deep channel Chairman William E. Borah [Rad. Rep., Idaho] of the senate foreign relations committee, said special attention would be given to a section of the pact drastically limiting the Chicago water diversion to 1,500 cubic second feet, plus pumpage for both sanitation and navigation.

Hearings Next Month.

The water diversion hearings will be held in Chicago, Washington, and possibly New York. Beginning the latter part of August they are scheduled to be completed in time for a report to be submitted by the investigating subcommittee to the full foreign relations committee in December.

Senator Borah said it was problematical whether the senate would ratify the treaty in the short session in December because the world court resolution has precedence. He is expected to head the foreign relations subcommittee which will delve into the controversial features of the pact designed to arrange for the joint construction of a seaway project whose total cost counting past and future expenditures may approach one billion dollars.

Senators Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.], Arthur Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.], Robert M. La Follette [Rad., Rep., Wis.], Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.], and Thomas J. Walsh [Dem., Mont.]; are to be the other members, it was said today.

Chicago Water Chief Topic.

The Chicago water diversion and the question of how the power developed in the international section is to be distributed furnish two of the major issues that will be threshed out by senate investigating bodies. New York state wants a monopoly of the 1,100,000 electric horse power which would accrue to the United States but intends to fight any move on the part of the state department to make it pay the full cost of power installations.

The decision to send a subcommittee to Chicago came after publication of the treaty terms had disclosed that the pact would close the door permanently to increasing the water diversion for navigation purposes on the lakes to the gulf waterway.

Cuts Gulf Channel Water.

The treaty, in effect, goes further than the Supreme court decree which limited the diversion after 1938 to 1,500 cubic second feet plus domestic pumpage for sanitation uses and the navigation requirements of the Chicago harbor. The new pact provides that the diversion conform to the Supreme court decree in perpetuity.

As the treaty was signed today by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Minister Herridge of Canada during a short two minute ceremony, it allows Canada to exercise jurisdiction over Lake Michigan to the extent of limiting the Chicago diversion, a step opposed by the whole Mississippi valley and especially Illinois.

It represents virtually a complete victory for Wisconsin and other lake states which have fought Chicago's right to a diversion either for health or navigation purposes. Hitherto Lake Michigan has not been considered

Claim Bishop Closes Doors to Ailing Poor

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—The Church of St. Mark's-in-the-Bowerie resounded with denunciations of Bishop William T. Manning for three hours today after the rector, Dr. William M. Guthrie, admitted a meeting which his "body and soul" clinic originally planned to hold outside.

Under the leadership of Dr. Edward S. Cowles, psychiatrist, whom Dr. Guthrie invited to establish the clinic in St. Mark's ten years ago, the patients gathered to protest a notice to vacate the church by July 31, served on them three weeks ago with the concurrence of Dr. Guthrie.

They found three plainclothes men, a uniformed policeman, and a sergeant, who said there would be no meeting because Dr. Guthrie had notified the police that any such meeting might attract elements or develop into a demonstration that might result in destruction of church property.

Invited into Church.

For two hours 200 patients who had come to the clinic for treatment of fears and other mental and nervous disturbances, wandered about in the hot sun.

Then Dr. Cowles, who got out of bed, suffering from bronchial pneumonia with a temperature of 102, arrived with Dudley Field Malone to open the meeting.

Dr. Guthrie, urged Dr. Cowles to go back to bed. Finally Dr. Guthrie invited the meeting inside the church.

"Talk has reached the vestry that the clinic is a menace." Dr. Guthrie said "St. Mark's has been overtaken by an economic situation; they have stopped our own work here. We have to close the church in August for repairs. Besides things have been stolen; vases have been stolen from the church. I hope Dr. Cowles will take a vacation which he needs, during July and August, so that we can get to work to house the clinic elsewhere."

Dr. Denounces Bishop.

Dr. Cowles, occasionally clutching his chest for breath, spoke next with concentrated fury

"Bishop Manning gave the order to abolish this clinic," he said. "The vestry have threatened Dr. Guthrie, that they will bring him before Bishop Manning who is hostile to him. Bishop Manning has been trying to get Dr. Guthrie's scalp for years."

"The speech you heard from Dr. Guthrie," Mr. Malone said, "was nothing but a man struggling publicly with himself to explain why. Dr. Guthrie is not weak; there are forces outside him which we must denounce and people we must hold to accounting. It is dreadful to contemplate Bishop Manning, the Lilliputian bishop of a great church, who forgets that Jesus drove the money changers out of the temple, while he himself is driving the poor out of this church."

"The trouble is that there are too many bigots in our Christian faith who do not like Jews coming into Christian churches."

"Let him drive this clinic into the street; let the poor never cross the portals of St. Mark's again, and Bishop Manning will next put Dr. Guthrie out of St. Mark's, and tear it down and build apartment houses for more gold."

"If this clinic goes out of this church it will be the bishop of the Episcopal diocese who put it out; and he will live up to the shriveled faith that is in him, rattling around on his Episcopal throne like a pea in a pod."

Monroe Douglas Robinson, nephew of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, advanced to the lectern to add his testimony, declaring that after "four years of acute melancholia, harrassed by drink," he had been cured by Dr. Cowles. He read a letter from his mother, Corinna Roosevelt Robinson, saying it would be "almost a calamity" if the poor were deprived of the ministrations of Dr. Cowles.

Crowds Watch Oil Tank Fire on North Shore

A terrific explosion wrecked a 20,000 gallon fuel oil tank of the Kutten Brothers Coal and Fuel company in the western section of Wilmette early this morning. Fire immediately spread to seven other tanks of similar capacity.

While the flames were still raging, watched by thousands of north shore residents, Joseph and Frank Kutten, brothers and owners of the company, appeared on the scene and declared that the blast was due to a bomb.

Tell of Previous Blast.

The brothers said that what apparently was a bomb was exploded beneath the tanks less than two weeks ago. Damage then was slight. They said that incident convinced them this morning's blast was also caused by a bomb. They knew of no motive for such an attack, however, and had no enemies, they said. They estimated the damage at less than $10,000.

Early investigation indicated that the fire originated in a small power house beside the tanks in the northern part of the block occupied by the fuel company on Laramie avenue, north of Wilmette avenue. The Skokie valley branch of the North Shore line runs past the tanks. A towerman for the railway, stationed nearby, said that 20 minutes before the explosion an automobile was driven into the fuel company grounds, and then was driven away.

The power house was wrecked by the blast. It was believed that the fire, starting in the power house, was carried by oil seepage to the nearest tank, causing that tank to explode.

Seven Other Tanks Catch Fire.

Three other tanks caught fire immediately and within a few minutes the blaze spread to four more. A ninth tank escaped damage. Firemen from Wilmette, Evanston, Glenview, and Niles Center checked the fire on the last four tanks and gradually got the flames on the other three under control.

The Kutten brothers were in their home in Wilmette when they were aroused by the explosion. Hundreds of other persons along the north shore were awakened, and within a short time all roads leading to the fire were packed with limousines and other cars.

Hundreds of persons gathered on the Skokie line tracks and because of this obstruction and the peril of flames it was necessary to reroute trains along the North Shore line.

GERMANY BANS POLITICAL FETES TO END RIOTING

Death Toll Rises to Twenty-One.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 18.—All open air demonstrations and processions were prohibited in Germany by Chancellor Franz von Papen's government today in an effort to put a swift end to the political riots which have marked the reichstag election campaign. The elections will be held on Sunday, July 31. The "battle for votes" reached its climax yesterday when fifteen demonstrators were killed and hundreds were injured in riots throughout the nation, principally between the communists and Adolf Hitler's National Socialists. Other deaths reported today increase the toll to 21.

FRANZ VON PAPEN

Must Stay Inside.

The only gatherings permitted under the new emergency decree must be held in halls or enclosed outdoor places designed for mass assemblies. Admission must be by ticket. The decree forbids the carrying of firearms.

Political leaders attempting to organize parades and outdoor meetings contrary to the decree will be imprisoned. Participants in parades and members of audiences at prohibited mass meetings will be ordered to pay a fine of $38.

If the new decree fails to preserve peace and order, official circles proclaim that the government is prepared to use all of its emergency power under famous Article 48 of the constitution, which gives the government dictatorial rights.

"The government will not hesitate in case of need to proceed severely against groups working with explosives and firearms, even to the extent of standing up against a wall and shooting those caught with firearms or explosives," today's decree said.

Special Rights for Courts.

It was decided to equip civil courts with special rights so that they might speedily inflict death penalties on those found guilty.

The demand of Hitler's Nazis to proclaim martial law was not granted by the government. The plea of Hitler's political rivals that the recent ban on uniforms of political "armies" again be imposed was also ignored.

Two Communists were slain in a clash with police at Langenselbold, near Hanau, today. The riot followed the burial of two women killed in jobless riots last Friday. Eight thousand Reds attacked police after the burial. The police fired into the mob.

Hitlerite Slain in Riot.

One Hitlerite was killed today in a riot at Gross-Rosen, near Breslau. A group of uniformed Nazis clashed with "iron fronters" [war veterans]. Axes, hoes, and revolvers were used as weapons.

The death toll at Altona, where communists yesterday fired upon 6,000 Hitlerites, participating in a "propaganda parade," was increased to fourteen tonight when two of the wounded died. Nine communists, two Nazis and three women were the victims. Altona police, who engaged in the fighting and fired upon the communist snipers perched on the housetops, announced today that an accurate check of the casualties is impossible. They claim that the communists concealed their dead.

Blind Boy, 19, Proves Begging Business Is Good

Edgar Smith, 19 years old and blind, was arrested yesterday for begging at State and Madison streets. His bond was fixed at $50 at the South State street police station. "That's easy," Smith said. He took $50 from the lining of his trousers and $47 in change from his pockets. Smith pocketed the change and was told to appear today for arraignment in boys' court.

Judge's Stolen Car Found on Insurance Deadline

Municipal Judge Thomas Green's automobile was stolen on May 18 in front of his home at 10633 Avenue S. Yesterday it was recovered in an alley in the rear of 7639 Langley avenue by Policemen Daniel Ryan and George Simpson. The discovery came just in time to prevent the judge collecting his theft insurance on the car, coming just within a sixty day limit.

South Winds Today to Push Heat to 95°

Scorching winds from the southwest are expected to send the temperature soaring to about 95 degrees in Chicago today, according to the forecast issued last night by C. A. Donnel, government meterorologist.

While there is some prospect of brief thundershowers late tonight and tomorrow, Mr. Donnel saw little hope of relief from this source, predicting continuation of the heat wave tomorrow. He added that there was little chance for relief by lake breezes which kept the temperatures from going well up into the nineties yesterday while the rest of the country east of the Rockies was sweltering.

Lake Wind Tempers Heat.

At 1 p. m. yesterday the mercury stood at 90. Then, at the rate of a degree an hour, it fell to 87 at 4 o'clock because of a shift in the wind from southwest to southeast. After 4 p. m., however, the breeze abated and the temperature rose again, reaching 92 degrees, the day's maximum, at 6 o'clock.

While Chicago was getting this temporary relief, the mercury mounted to 100 degrees and higher in the Dakotas, Montana, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas and the south.

Four Men Drowned.

Milton Bogdanow, 21 years old, 2202 West North avenue, a student at Lewis Institute, lost his life yesterday when he sank while swimming off the Foster street beach in Evanston. The body was recovered about twenty minutes later. Efforts to revive the victim were unsuccessful.

Carl G. Gustafson, 28 years old, 7342 South La Salle street, was drowned when he dived into Brownwood lake near Paw Paw, Mich. It is believed he struck his head on a submerged plank.

The third victim was Earl Jackson, 37 years old, 914 St. Charles road, Maywood. He drowned in a clay hole at North avenue and the Soo railroad. The body was recovered by the highway police.

Henry Tavenler, 45 years old, 408 South Genesee street, Waukegan, was drowned last evening in Diamond lake, near Mundelein. It was believed he suffered a cramp while swimming about fifty feet off shore. The body was recovered.

Opens Fire Hydrant; Fined.

Joseph Barcello, 1338 West Austin avenue, was fined $2 yesterday by Municipal Judge Alfred O. Erickson for turning on a fire hydrant near his home on Saturday. The water department of the city had complained on that day of a heavy drain on supplies by unauthorized opening of the hydrants.

More people visited Lincoln park on Sunday than on any previous day in its history, according to Supt. H. Otto Weege. His estimate of the number reached the incredible figure of a million. A hundred workers yesterday were required to gather up the sixty tons of paper and other debris left behind.

ROYAL AIR FORCE BEGINS BOMBLESS DEFENSE TESTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 18.—The royal air force tonight began "depression" maneuvers. Not a round of ammunition or a bomb, not even a dummy bomb, will be wasted during the annual test of the nation's air defenses this week.

Three thousand officers and men and 260 machines will take part in the mimic warfare. For the purposes of the maneuvers the attacking forces are presumed to lie across the channel. London will not be involved the defense being concentrated on the south coast and the industrial regions of the midlands.

Dummy bombs were carried tonight, but merely to fulfill the weight requirements of the war games. Hits will be recorded by cameras, which will register flashes of light, indicating when theoretical bombs have been released.

LEADING RUSH TO SHARE FUND FOR EMERGENCY

Pinchot May Win in Race for Relief.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Chicago and Illinois are seeking to be the "Sooners" in the rush for the new federal relief funds. A representative delegation is here to make first application, if possible, as soon as the President signs the bill making possible the emergency loans provided under the two billions, 122 millions appropriations to the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

They made an informal request to the corporation officials this afternoon, but formal application can be made only by Gov. L. L. Emmerson. Leaders of the delegations tried repeatedly to reach Mr. Emmerson by phone today to give him the form of application and request speed.

Pinchot Also in the Race.

The Illinois men may be defeated in the rush by Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania. Mr. Pinchot made application for $45,000,000 for his state. Ten million, he said, must be awarded immediately "to organized relief to prevent starvation and disorders in Pennsylvania."

Illinois will ask its full quota of $45,000,000 but may be awarded a much smaller sum as emergency rations.

The first emergency funds that Chicago will receive will be devoted to relief of the unemployed, especially to carrying on the relief station work now nearly depleted of money. Later loans may be negotiated for the public employés, including school teachers, out of the loan fund which must have security.

Representing Chicago and Illinois in their request for emergency funds are Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton of Chicago, De Witt Billman, secretary of state legislative reference bureau; Wilfred S. Reynolds, and C. P. Goodspeed, all members of the state relief organization.

Immediate Aid Needed.

"We are here solely in our capacity as members of the Illinois commission on relief," Sexton said. "We are not in position to make any expression as to the amount needed or to file any application. That is entirely up to the governor.

"Cook county will have to close its relief stations Friday unless we get immediate help. Other sections of the state are in a similar situation.

"Mr. Billman and I talked informally today with members of the Reconstruction Finance corporation board about the situation. We did not go into it officially because the bill has not yet become a law and because Gov. Emmerson must make the application."

No Publicity Ban in House.

One important problem concerning the general loans by the finance corporation was under consideration today. South Trimble, clerk of the house of representatives, was busy consulting authorities in an attempt to arrive at a decision on the publicity clause contained in the relief measure.

The bill was passed last Saturday with the understanding in the senate that it did not order publicity for past loans by the corporation and that the secretary of the senate, to whom monthly reports of the loans will be made during the congressional recess, is to keep the reports secret.

This senate decision, however, is not binding on the clerk of the house, and Mr. Trimble said he would consult house members before deciding whether the reports should be secret or open to inspection.

Los Angeles Not a Laggard.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 18.—[Special.]—The Los Angeles city council today voted unanimously to appeal for support by congressmen and President Hoover in securing financial aid through the Reconstruction Finance corporation to push immediately the $220,000,000 aqueduct from Colorado river to Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles dominated metropolitan water district, which united eleven southern California cities for passing bonds for the 250 mile aqueduct, has been maintaining a lobby for months at Washington, headed by James H. Howard, the water bureau's attorney, to work for federal funds for southern California's projects.

Charles H. Randall, president of the local council and former congressman, introduced the resolution asking for reconstruction corporation money. It notes that work on the Colorado aqueduct can be started if the R. F. C. exchanges cash for a slice of California aqueduct bonds, and that much would then be accomplished "to relieve employment in southern California by providing thousands of jobs."

CHICAGO SCHOOL PROBLEM

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

A committee of Chicago school trustees worked yesterday on the problem of cash for the schools—seeking to cut the costs without waiting for government aid. The school engineers' union urged the trustees to keep the schools open and promised to do its share toward making this possible. The offer was made by Joseph Spain, head of the union, to a committee of trustees—Carr, Savage, Mrs. Heffernan, and Buehler—considering a reduction in the cost of operating the school houses.

The Strayer report recommended the discharge of 502 engineers and janitors and a cut in the pay of those remaining to effect a total saving of $1,626,000. For the engineers the Strayer group recommended a cut of 21 per cent.

"Will you accept a 21 per cent pay cut?" asked Trustee McJunkin.

Object to Salary Cut.

"If you will keep the schools open and educate the children," replied Mr. Spain, "we will work without pay for the same length of time that other employés do, whether it is one month or two months or more. But we object to a reduction in our salary schedule.

"We want the same treatment you accord other employés, we offered to work 12 months a year for 11 months' pay, and you accepted that proposal in your 1932 budget. We assumed that you would have other employés do the same, but instead you have closed the schools for two weeks, which we deplore.

"We are not overpaid, though some school engineers get more salary than the principals of their schools.

Cites Case of Teachers.

"Under the Miller teachers' annuity law you have appropriated $800,000 this year. That law says that when a teacher has reached 70 years of age she shall receive $1,500 a year in addition to her pension.

"The superintendent of schools said here last week that there are 525 teachers on the supernumerary list at full pay, who are not doing much except substituting. These 525 teachers get a total of $1,050,000. So the board is paying ex-teachers and teachers who are doing nothing, except some substituting, $1,850,000 a year. This $1,850,000 a year is more than you pay all of the engineers in the service."

Attitude of Janitors Told.

William McFerridge, representing the janitors' union, said his union would coöperate with the board in eliminating any unneeded employés, but he protested against any further cut in janitors' monthly pay of $140.

"With the donated month, they now receive less than $129 a month," said McFerridge. "When they pay their pension, disability fee and four car fares a day, they have less than $100 a month.

Mr. McFerridge detailed the distress of the janitors throughout the system from the lack of pay.

Janitresses Called Destitute.

Elizabeth Grady of the janitresses' union said: "We're not in the union business now, we are in the charity business. Our women are in desperate circumstances."

"Why attempt to make all of your savings on the $5,300,000 pay roll of the janitors and engineers," asked Mr. Spain, "and not consider the $35,000,000 pay roll of the teachers?"

Several members of the committee by comments indicated their intention to trim the pay roll of plant operation. Action will be deferred until a survey is completed by Business Manager Howard P. Savage.

Teachers Oppose Committee.

Opposition was launched by the school teachers last night against the Sargent citizens' committee on public expenditures and the bankers who appeared before the trustees last Tuesday and urged a reduction of "$15,000,000 at least" in school expenditures and tax levies, if the board would regain its credit.

The first protest speech came from Charles Stillman, president of the joint conference of principals and teachers, over the radio last night. He referred to the Sargent committee as "a fairly complete set-up of a voluntary, extra-legal supergovernment."

Mr. Stillman said that the committee members would place "themselves in an untenable and anti-social position" if they persist in demanding a slash of $15,000,000 in addition to the reductions already made.

"But if they do persist in demands that mean disaster," said Mr. Stillman, "we are confident that the board of education will not abjectly yield."

PRATT WILL BARE FINANCES OF HIS TAX FIGHTING GROUP

John M. Pratt, executive director of the Association of Real Estate Taxpayers of Illinois, will appear at the state's attorney's office at 10 a. m. tomorrow, carrying with him records of the organization's finances.

He will be questioned by Assistant State's Attorneys William Rittenhouse and Grenville Beardsley. He has promised to bring in the complete files of the association, showing receipts and disbursements, Mr. Beardsley said. Whether other officials of the group might be called was not indicated.

The association is only one of three left of the many which sprang into existence during the last few years. It is one of the more powerful tax fighting associations. Its collections were said to have been more than $400,000, based on $10 fees and 1 per cent of the tax bill.

Thirteen Men Arrested in Three Gambling Raids

State's attorney's police, directed by Sergt. Edward Casey, raided three alleged gambling establishments yesterday. Three persons were arrested as keepers and 100 patrons sent home in a raid on a place on the second floor at 16 South Clark street, said to belong to Jimmi Mundi, well known gambler. At 920 North Wells street four men were arrested and 50 persons allowed to depart. Police said the place is owned by Edward "Piggy" Joyce. A third raid, at 9 East Erie street, brought the arrest of six men as keepers. Nine persons were allowed to depart.

Legion Monthly Manager Killed Climbing Mountain

Estes Park, Colo., July 18.—[Special.]—Robert F. Smith, general manager of the American Legion Monthly, was killed by a dislodged rock while climbing Long's peak here today. Smith was in a party of seven, among them his wife. On the ascent he had stopped for a rest when a rock dislodged from the mountainside far above catapulted down and struck him on the head. Smith's home was in Indianapolis, Ind.

U. S. IN $225,000 SCHOOL SURVEY TELLS OF 'FRILLS'

Summary of Findings Revealed at U. of C.

An example of United States government bureau activities was revealed yesterday when a tentative summary of the work of the National Survey of Secondary Education was given by Prof. Leonard V. Koos, of the University of Chicago, an associate director of the federal survey.

The survey was authorized by congress in February, 1929. An appropriation of $225,000 was made to the work.

Prof. Koos described the survey at the opening meeting of the five day session of a conference for public school administrators at the university. He pointed out that the inquiry would have required 60 or 70 years for one man alone to accomplish. Instead of one man, four groups of investigators were employed. Included also was a staff of thirty members, which was assisted at times by as many as thirty clerical workers. Among the findings were that fads and frills had increased in the curriculae of high schools and that these were more often necessary than some traditional features of education.

200,000 Forms Sent Out.

Revealing the scope of the survey, Prof. Koos said that about 80 different forms of questionnaires were distributed, ranging from a single page to 46 pages. The total of forms sent out, he added, was almost 200,000, and these went to pupils, former pupils, parents, employers, teachers, school systems and elsewhere. The total number of visits to schools made by professional specialists was more than 850, said the professor, and the total of different schools visited was 550.

These visits, Prof. Koos revealed, required travel amounting to nearly 200,000 railroad miles. This travel took the specialists into forty-one states and the District of Columbia, he said.

"The distance traveled and the areas represented are evidence that the survey is what its title indicates—a national survey," said the professor. "The completed report will extend through 28 monographs, to be published in the autumn and early winter, totaling from 3,000 to 3,500 printed pages. These monographs will range from 40 or 50 to 300 pages."

Benefit's to be Obscure.

The true significance of much of the survey would not at once become apparent, the professor predicted. The task of interpretation must be the coöperative responsibility of many minds, and in that sense, he declared, the work of interpreting the evidence of the survey would not be completed "until the last reader of the printed report years hence will have reacted to its contents."

The schools selected for visitations, he said, were those where "innovations and outstanding practices" were to be found. The general survey revealed, he said, that half of the total population of high school age in America now go to secondary schools—public and private—as against 4 per cent in 1890.

The survey showed, he said, a wide increase in curriculum programs. In one group of schools, he said, the number of courses increased from 53 to 306 over a period of 20 years. At the same time there were shifts away from old subjects, notably foreign languages and mathematics, he said. In some schools the decline here was 95.6 per cent.

New Subjects Introduced.

"Other subjects came in to take the place of those losing ground," said Prof. Koos. "Among the greatest increment were nonacademic subjects—the fine arts, practical arts, and physical education."

In certain schools, he said, this group of nonacademic subjects had come to claim from a third to two-fifths of all the pupils' times in the classroom. The figures for nongraduates in those nonacademic subjects would be even larger, he estimated.

Prof. Koos devoted several minutes to a discussion of the survey's inquiry into school libraries. The specialist investigating that phase, he said, circularized 400 schools, traveled more than 13,000 miles to visit forty or more of their libraries, and sent out forms to some 17,000 pupils.

In conclusion, Prof. Koos said that the study was aimed to foster in the various states the same educational ideals. It was essential, he said, for school heads in one state to have made known to them the progress of schools in other states. "This," he said, "is the service of the National Survey of Secondary Education."

THREE BRITISH TRAINS BREAK SPEED RECORDS OVER LONG DISTANCES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 18.—One world and two European railroad speed records were set today by British trains. The "Flying Scotsman," famous luxury express train, beat its own record by traveling the 392¼ miles from London to Edinburgh in seven hours and 27 minutes, or three minutes faster than ever before. Its average speed was 56 miles an hour. The run was made without a stop, two crews handling the locomotive on the world's longest continuous run.

The Liverpool-London express train traveled 152½ miles between Crewe and Euston in 137 minutes—five minutes better than the previous record, establishing a European speed record for the fastest nonstop journey of 150 miles. The average speed was over 64 miles an hour.

The Manchester-London train, scheduled to cover 177 miles between Wilmslow and Euston in 172 minutes at an average of 61 miles an hour, arrived in Euston six minutes ahead of time, setting a new record for the longest journey in Europe to be timed at more than 60 miles an hour.

THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, FAMOUS U. OF I. DEAN, DIES

Noted for His Specialty in College World.

Urbana, Ill., July 18.—(AP)—Thomas Arkle Clark, America's pioneer dean of men, is dead.

He who knew more men personally than perhaps any other campus personality died today of an ailment diagnosed as cancer. He had been ill since his retirement from the faculty of the University of Illinois last August. He was 70.

Dean Clark was the originator among universities of the office from which he retired. His mastery of student psychology brought him national fame. It led to his once being charged by students with heading a widespread campus spy system. Publicly Dean Clark never denied these charges. Privately—not many months before his death he laughingly admitted that his "spy system" was for the most part the product of student imagination.

"Of course I get information about erring students from sundry sources," he said, "but, for the most part, guilty students tell on themselves."

Adopted Students' Fads.

Dean Clark was known to thousands of students and former students as "Tommy Arkle." When the students adopted a fad "Tommy Arkle" also adopted it. He went about the campus hatless, his loose white hair rumpled—a tall, slender figure who greeted almost every person he met by his first name.

When drinking became a serious offense, the dean astonished many students by calling them into his office and revealing that he knew how much wine remained in the bottles carefully hidden in their trunks. The dean, who originated the no-car rule on the campus, also had an unnerving manner of finding out the number of automobiles which left town each Sunday afternoon and the names of the students riding therein.

In many ways the dean was indefatigable. He was forever visiting the bedsides of students who had reported themselves ill. Night after night he would drop in on fraternity gatherings. As Prof. Franklin W. Scott, a former associate, said, "he will manage to get around to a smoker, a meeting of church deacons, an operation on an undergraduate in the hospital, a dance and theatrical rehearsal in an evening, and he dictating letters at 5 o'clock the next morning."

The disciplinary part of his work was merely incidental to his greater work of fathering the student, and urging on to his best efforts.

Funeral Tomorrow.

Thomas Arkle, whose family name was Metcalf, was born on a farm near Minonk, Ill., in 1862. He adopted the name of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William Clark, who reared him.

Working his way through the university academy and the university, he went on the university faculty staff in 1893, became a full professor in 1898, served in that position until 1901, when he became dean of undergraduates and assistant to the president, and made dean of men in 1909.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday in Urbana.

HOPE TO SOLVE 'CARD' DEATH AT SEANCE TODAY

Mrs. Susie Ballo, 2546 South Lawndale avenue, the fortune teller who predicted the death of George Carl less than three days before he was shot and killed in his grocery at 2511 South Crawford avenue late Saturday night, will reënact her fulfilled card prediction for the police today.

The card reading will take place in the grocery where Carl died. Mrs. Vera Carl, the grocer's widow, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Grilec, who attended the original reading, will be present. Ivan Grilec, brother of Mrs. Carl, who has been held for questioning since Sunday, also will be there. Lieut. Herbert Burns and detectives of the Lawndale station, in charge of the case, will look on. The reading will be important to them for whatever psychological consequences may develop.

No new clews were developed last night in the inquiry. As part of the investigation police seized four friends of Mrs. Ballo. They are John Milosic, 3245 South Crawford avenue; Frank and Anton Catla, 3137 Millard avenue, and Edward Viscika, 3245 South Crawford avenue. Technically held last night also were Mrs. Carl and John Pettek, a friend, whom she had visited shortly before Carl was killed.

Mrs. Carl collapsed yesterday at the inquest and the hearing was continued to July 26 for further investigation. Mrs. Ballo also testified. She said she could not explain her powers, but asserted that it "was just in the cards for Carl to die."

2 AUNTS OFFER TO ADOPT BABY LEFT BY FATHER

Eight month old "Buddy" Farr, who was given away by his father to a fellow passenger on a bus trip into Chicago, may be given a home in Oklahoma City. Judge Joseph A. Graber announced in the Court of Domestic Relations yesterday that two aunts of the child, his mother's sisters, who live in Oklahoma City, had offered to adopt the child if consent could be secured. The aunts are Mrs. Fred Aaron and Mrs. Violet Meis.

Judge Graber said he would commit Fred Farr, 41 years old, father of the baby, to an institution for the feeble minded at Lincoln, Ill. An examination by Dr. David B. Rothman disclosed that Farr, who served as a marine in the world war, has the mentality of a nine year old child. Farr informed the court at a previous hearing that he had secured a marriage license, but no ceremony had been performed between himself and Buddy's mother because she was not sure she was divorced from her former husband. The mother, Lola Mosley, has not been found.

The child remains at St. Vincent's infant home, where it was taken by Mrs. Robert D. Talbert of St. Louis. Mrs. Talbert was on her way to Chicago when she encountered the father and baby. She comforted Buddy when he cried, whereupon Farr left.

BAIN ASSISTANT TELLS STORY OF BANKS' CLOSING

Recounts Failure to Get Loans to Stop Runs.

Testimony concerning the closing of the 12 Bain banks on June 9, 1931, that was to mean the loss of $13,000,000 to depositors, was given yesterday by Charles H. Meacham, formerly assistant to John Bain, in the court of Judge John M. O'Connor. Bain and three members of his family are on trial on a conspiracy charge as a result of the closing of the banks.

C. H. MEACHAM.

Other banks had closed on June 8, Meacham testified, and the Bain banks needed cash to withstand any runs the next day. The expected runs developed early on June 9 at the Chatham, Stony Island, and Bryn Mawr banks. Meacham said he appealed to a loop bank for cash and was told the Bain banks' credit was $400,000, but that if runs meant the banks were to close, the loop bank wouldn't lend the $400,000.

Banks Ordered Closed.

"I telephoned Mr. Bain," the witness said. "He telephoned the downtown bank. "When he called me back he was crying. He told me to close all the banks. I had the switchboard operator call each of the twelve cashiers. I dictated a statement they were to paste on the front doors, signed by John Bain."

Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber obtained from the witness a series of explanations of why the Bain banks were refused further loans. The banks had collateral posted for a loan not to exceed $400,000, Meacham said. He explained that there was no more collateral to put up.

The witness gave an account of the financing of the Bain banks, and the Bain subsidiary companies, John Bain, Inc., the Lewes company, and other companies they had absorbed. John Bain, Inc., was a concern to consolidate the management of the various properties and assets of Bain banks into one organization.

Each day he would get at the office of John Bain, Inc., a report of the cash on hand, the assets and the clearings of the various banks, Meacham said. From the downtown office he would decide how much additional cash each Bain bank would need and he would borrow the aggregate amount and then allocate a share to each bank.

Tells Effort to Get Cash.

Meacham testified that Bain made a final effort to get $40,000 on the day the bank closed. [Raber openly accused Bain of stealing that amount on the last day he headed the twelve banks] Meacham said the Chatham bank reported it had only $5,000 on hand on the closing day.

"You say a bank had only $5,000 on hand," Judge O'Connor remarked. "That doesn't sound like a bank to me. I'd like an explanation."

Francis X. Busch, defense attorney, said he thought a question or two would bring out the desired information. Meacham then said that this lack of cash might have been due to the run on the Chatham bank in progress that morning.

Raber then drew from the witness the story of a sale of the Bain bank assets on Dec. 30, 1930, and the repurchase of them on Jan. 2, 1931. The witness admitted that this transaction enabled the Bain banks to publish a financial statement as of Jan. 1, 1931, showing they owed no money to other banks.

"Mr. Bain said, 'It will make a better showing if the banks are out of debt,'" the witness declared.

Other testimony of the day had to do with valuations intended to show that the banks were insolvent for some time before they were closed.

FALL OFF LADDER FATAL.

Mrs. Ida Schalk, 60 years old, 4337 West 21st street, died yesterday at the Women's and Children's hospital of injuries suffered July 7 when she fell from a ladder in her home.

LOTUS BLOSSOMS COVER SURFACE OF GRASS LAKE

Scene on Lake county body of water, which is one of the few places outside of Egypt where the water plant flourishes. The lotus beds were nearly destroyed by the floods of 1924, but they are spreading again and are now about the same size they were before 1924.

Best in Years

Thousands of lotus blooms have come out in the last few days in the extensive beds in Grass lake, near Antioch. John J. O'Connor, hotel proprietor on the lake and an enthusiastic lotus fancier, asserted yesterday that the display is superior to any in the last few years. Grass lake is the only spot in the Chicago area where the lotus, which is indigenous to Egypt, grows on an extensive scale.

High water levels in the lakes several years ago caused serious damage to the lotus beds and for a time it was feared they had been destroyed, but the beds now appear to be about as extensive as ever, according to O'Connor.

One of them estimated its additional revenue at $72,000 and the other at almost this much.

The manager of one of the large loop department stores said their business fell off during the conventions, but was unusually good just before and after.

"Anyway, Chicago made a lot of friends and many of them are sure to come back," he said.

CONVENTIONS AID BUSINESS HERE, SURVEY SHOWS

Guarantees to Parties Being Paid.

The Republican and Democratic national conventions not only made many friends for Chicago, in the opinion of Chicago business men, but also were successful ventures from a financial standpoint.

Edward N. Hurley, whose citizens' committee brought the conventions to Chicago and guaranteed their expenses up to $150,000 each, said yesterday that subscriptions were being paid in a manner that insures giving each party all that was promised.

Make Good Guarantees.

"Merchants, hotel proprietors, taxicab and amusement companies, the firms that pledged contributions, all are fulfilling their guarantees," said Mr. Hurley. He was emphatic in denying reports that Chicago would not be able to make good on its promises.

"We agreed to pay the Republicans' expenditures up to $150,000," said the chairman of the citizens' committee. "Already $110,000 has been paid and the bookkeepers are figuring out how much we owe.

"The same holds true for the Democrats. They were promised $150,000 and Stadium rent. We've paid them $140,000 and taken care of the hall rent, a $12,000 item. Even the concessions for lemonade and badges made money—only about $1,000, but more than enough to make up for the few hundred dollars lost on the Republican conclave."

Business Best in Thirty Years.

The Congress hotel, one of the principal headquarters of the party leaders, reported its business during the conventions was the best in 30 years, that the hotel was filled to capacity and that hundreds of guests were turned away.

Reports from the two largest taxicab companies, which guaranteed a total of $12,000 to the citizens' committee, were just as indicative of the financial success of the conventions.

ROBBERS BIND 2 WOMEN WITH WIRE IN HOME

Three armed robbers entered the home of Mrs. Mary Dietzel at 2342 Rosemont avenue last evening and after binding Mrs. Dietzel and a guest, Mrs. Josephine Felzer, fled with $54.

The trio used wire from a radio connection to tie the hands and feet of the women. Mrs. Dietzel's 17 year old son, Richard, arrived while the robbery was in progress and was locked in a closet. The money was taken from a dresser drawer where Mrs. Dietzel had concealed it.

A boy about 17 years old, armed with a pistol, held up Mrs. Oscar Goldstandt, 3417 Ainslie street, in her home last night and forced her to surrender a purse containing $55.

WOMAN, HURT IN CRASH FATAL TO FATHER, DIES

One automobile death in Cook county yesterday increased the toll since Jan. 1 to 604. The victim:

Mrs. Floyd A. Smith, 38 years old, of Gary. Died at the Oak Park hospital from hurts incurred on June 16, when the car in which she was a passenger, was demolished by an Aurora and Elgin electric train at the Mannheim road crossing in Bellwood. Her father, E. O. Perkins of Goodland, Ind., was killed in the crash.

The body of a man killed when he was struck by an automobile at Archer and Avers avenues, Sunday, was identified last evening as that of Clem Widzes, 43 years old, 3255 South Halsted street.

Michael Walsh, 59 years old, formerly a member of the Naperville city council, died at an Aurora hospital from injuries sustained Sunday in a collision of two automobiles at Naperville. His wife was so critically hurt that physicians fear for her life.

Waldo F. Barman, 3 years old, was killed outside his home at Cedar Lake, Ind., 20 miles south of Hammond, yesterday, when a truck driven by R. G. Vaughn, a neighbor, backed up and ran over him.

3 Burned to Death as Plane Crashes in Takeoff

Benton Harbor, Mish., July 18. —[Special.]—William Portratz, 49, of Baroda was burned to death and Wesley Kenney, stunt parachute jumper, and Harold Overmeyer, 25, of Niles, the pilot, were so severely burned they died within a few hours when an unlicensed Eaglerod airplane crashed into a tree in a take off near Baroda today.

MENTAL TEST IS ORDERED.

Anthony Spoit, 42 years old, 8737 Commercial avenue, who attempted to commit suicide Sunday by leaping into the Calumet river at 92d street, was ordered to the psychopathic hospital for examination yesterday by Judge Samuel H. Trude.

12 SENTENCED IN RUM RING; CHIEF GETS TWO YEARS

Twelve members of a $3,500,000 south side liquor syndicate were sentenced yesterday by Federal Judge John P. Barnes. Ben Black, leader of the ring, was sentenced to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth for two years. His brother, Frank, and Harold D. Meyer, lieutenants who shared in the profits, were sentenced to a year and a day each in Leavenworth.

William Wolf, an employé, was sentenced to 60 days in the county jail and seven other employés received 30 day terms in jail. They are: Anton Barsda, Jack Holland, Morris J. Geary, Frank J. McManus, Patrick Ryan, Henry C. Cooling, and Fred Dillmore. Mrs. Luella Mara, 3608 Lake Park avenue, in whose home the syndicate maintained a manufacturing plant, was sentenced to six months in jail. The sentence was suspended by Judge Barnes and the woman was placed on probation.

Frank Black was found guilty by a jury. The rest of the defendants had pleaded guilty. Prosecutor Daniel Anderson said that the ring operated on the south side as an independent concern from 1929 to 1931. The yearly output was 30,000 gallons of whisky, which sold for $1,166,000, the prosecutor said.

U. S. SEEKS NEW INDICTMENT OF CAPONE AND GANG

Seize Al's Brother and His Bodyguard.

Federal officials disclosed yesterday that they were about ready for the reindictment of the $100,000,000 Capone beer trust. The new indictment, it was reported, will name more than 100 members of the syndicate, including Al and Ralph Capone, both of whom are in prison.

Al Capone, who is serving an eleven year prison term for income tax dodging, and 68 members of his gang were indicted in an alleged $10,000,000 a year beer conspiracy a year ago. Since that time about half a dozen Capone breweries have been raided and new evidence has been unearthed, linking other Capone gangsters with the conspiracy, federal authorities said.

Will Name Gang Leaders.

Prospective defendants are said to include Johnny Torrio, exiled leader of the Capone gang; Sam and Harry Guzik, brothers of Jack Guzik, who is in Leavenworth prison serving a tax sentence; Ralph Capone, Michael (Bon Bon) Allegretti, former manager of the Cicero Cotton club, and Hymie Levine, alleged syndicate collector for the loop. None of these was named in the original indictment.

Principals to be reindicted, it was learned, include Joe Fusco and Bert Delaney, leaders of the Capone beer business, and Mike Potson, owner of Colosimo's restaurant.

Assistant United States Attorney Daniel Anderson, who will present the case to the grand jury, said yesterday that he hoped to present the evidence before the end of the July term. Chicago police are said to have coöperated with agents of the special prohibition unit in gathering the evidence against the booze combine.

Capone Brother Arrested.

In this connection John Capone, 30 years old, a brother of Al, and his bodyguard, Rocco Senna, 19 years old, were seized at Wabash avenue and Congress street yesterday as known members of the Capone organization. The men were questioned by Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker and then viewed by Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Foley, who rented the flat in which the machine gun assassins of George (Red) Barker, labor racketeer, kept their vigil. The couple failed to identify either of the captives.

May Sell 101 Ranch to Capone.

Ponca City, Okla., July 18.—(AP)—Col. Zack Miller, last of the family which founded the 101 ranch and wild west show, said tonight that negotiations were in progress for sale of the property to Al Capone, imprisoned gang leader, but that another deal appeared more likely to be consummated.

"I have no idea the Capone transaction will be completed," Miller told inquirers here, at the same time refusing to amplify his statement concerning other prospective purchasers.

SAFECRACKERS ROB NUMBER OF JEWELERS IN TALL SKYSCRAPER

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Safecrackers, carrying a crowbar, a brace and bit and a burglar's instrument known as a can opener, which they abandoned after rifling six safes, committed a systematic series of burglaries in the sixteen story building, occupied by manufacturing jewelers at 74 West 46th street last night.

The men entered at 9 p. m., bound and tied up the watchman in the cellar and worked until 4:30 a. m., when they left with loot estimated to be worth $63,500.

THOSE WHO PAY URGE U. S. QUIT BUSINESS FIELD

Complaints Are Lodged at Congressional Hearing.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kansas City, Mo., July 18.—[Special.]—How to get the government out of business in competition with private enterprise was the subject to which a congressional committee headed by Representative Joseph B. Shannon of Kansas City addressed itself today. More than 100 lines in which bureaucracy at Washington has invaded the fields of trade, commerce, and industry as a rival of manufacturers, merchants, and other business men were covered in briefs presented at the initial hearing.

REPRESENTATIVE SHANNON.

M. W. Borders, in presenting the data assembled by the Federation of American Business, which has branches in 34 states and represents more than 160 industries suffering from competition from government boards and bureaus financed by taxpayers' money, set forth that bureaucracy has grown to such proportions that it threatens the existence of the present form of American government.

Pay Rollers Usurp Business.

As Mr. Borders viewed it, the economic issue at the basis of the depression has resolved itself into this:

A battle between increasing armies of federal pay rollers to usurp the business of private citizens from whom the taxes come. Keep it up much longer, he argued, and the day will dawn when to extract taxes from industry will be like squeezing blood from a turnip, and meanwhile prosperity will still tarry around the corner and factory chimneys will remain smokeless.

As a curtain raiser for the inquiry into bureaucracy which is causing widespread interest in the southwest winter wheat belt by especial reason of the federal farm board's gamble in wheat in which it dropped a quarter of a billion dollars of public funds while prices have dropped to the lowest point in the memory of living man, Congressman Shannon dwelt upon an experience in the closing days of congress.

Restaurant Case Cited.

The government wanted to go into the restaurant business in Kansas City by putting in a café in the new federal building to compete with lunchrooms and restaurants in the neighborhood. A roar went up. Shannon made such a kick in congress that $750,000 for government cafés here and elsewhere was knocked out of one of the pork barrel bills.

"But bureaucrats never sleep," said Shannon. "We knocked it out, but the bureaus got it in again and tried to slip it over. It was only by kicking up a row in the senate almost in the closing hours that the $750,000 was knocked out for good. A bureau is like a Frankenstein monster; once created, you can't kill it off and it keeps on growing and running around knocking off private enterprise and trying to drive to the wall the very business men and industrialists who pay its salaries."

Protests from Every State.

The avalanche of protests against government in business has come from every state, according to Chairman Shannon. So many organizations have asked a chance to be heard that he figures the hearings, instead of lasting a week or two, may run almost through the summer.

"The increasing encroachment of government upon business," said Mr. Borders, "is the fault of the taxpayers as well as of congress. In the period of easy money blocs of people wanted certain things done by the government. Today, as a result, thousands of government enterprises are in direct conflict with private business. We'll never get back to prosperity unless through some influence all these interests are collected and put on the scrap heap.

"The withering touch of governmental competition with private business is mirrored in our present economic collapse.

Called Unfair Competition.

"Government in business is unfair competition because it uses the strength of government forces and funds, because it pays no taxes, because it restricts private opportunity, because it is not conducted on the regular and normal business basis, because it increases taxation and reduces the tax source."

The citations of government activities in business, embraced in the briefs, ranged from Uncle Sam in the sausage and pickling business to the government in grain and cotton, where it dropped 500 million dollars in the last three years, prices meanwhile sliding to new low levels.

As one exhibit Chairman Shannon produced a young man whom he had sent into the government stores in Washington to buy a complete outfit of clothing. The young fellow came back togged out from shoes to hat with government retailed goods, and in addition had got a shave and a hair cut in a government barber shop. Shannon some months ago caused a furor in congress by waving a suit of pink silk pajamas with green polka dots which he said his secretary had purchased in a government store. "You can buy anything from a paper of pins to a grand piano," he said.

An arraignment of the operations of the federal board was presented by Col. Ruby D. Garrett of the Kansas City chamber of commerce.

"The government," he said, "has entered into lines of private business estimated at more than 200 separate activities.

Farm Board Operations Cited.

Col. Garret dwelt on the farm board operations, in which half a billion dollars of taxpayers' money was tossed to the winds in the greatest crop gamble in history.

BOY, 4, KILLED BY AUTO.

Moline, Ill., July 18.—[Special.]—Robert Havener, 4 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Havener of Moline was killed here today when he was struck by an automobile driven by R. Oelschlaeger, instructor in the Trinity Lutheran Parochial school of Sawyer, Mich.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Members of the board of trustees of the First Congregational church at Blue Island yesterday stated the Rev. I. L. Mellott had been injured by a report in THE TRIBUNE that his resignation had been requested on the ground that he was overpaid. The resignation of the pastor, the board added, had been agreed on amicably and he had the body's best wishes in obtaining another post.

In THE TRIBUNE of Saturday it was stated that Joseph Briggs, convicted of confidence game, had headquarters at 6130 Cottage Grove avenue. The store at that address is now occupied by the Finance Credit company and Russell Motor company, which moved in after Briggs had vacated the premises.

TAXI MONOPOLY BILL IS REVIVED BY ALDERMEN

Chicago taxicab companies, whose rates are already the highest of the fourteen largest cities of the country, would be privileged to boost them still higher under the provisions of the so-called monopoly ordinance, it was disclosed yesterday when revised copies of that measure became available.

ALD. TOMAN.

The copies were distributed at an unannounced meeting of a council subcommittee on traffic and public safety, which will consider the proposed ordinance.

Revises Extra Fare Charge.

The meter rates of fare set up are those charged at present by the large Chicago taxicab companies, 25 cents for the first quarter mile and 10 cents for each additional half mile, but the measure revives the old extra charge for additional passengers, which has not been imposed in Chicago for several years. It would permit a charge of 10 cents for each additional passenger for the entire trip.

The ordinance, drafted by a subcommittee headed by Ald. John Toman [23], had lain dormant in the council files for more than a year and was mysteriously revived last February. It would limit the number of taxicabs in Chicago to 4,600, and would prohibit the small independent cab operators from transferring their licenses to operate, without permission from a taxicab regulatory board.

Higher Rates Authorized.

The original ordinance draft made no mention of rates, but would have allowed to stand the old schedule provided by city ordinance, made obsolete by competition. These rates, still on the statute book, are 40 cents for the first half mile, 10 cents for each additional quarter mile, and 25 cents for each additional passenger. Cabs have been operated at the 25 and 10 rates since 1928, however.

The proposed ordinance was denounced as a monopoly measure yesterday by Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th] and James B. Waller [43d]. The subcommittee will hold a public hearing tomorrow on the proposal.

HELD ON LIQUOR CHARGE.

Oscar Brady, who is alleged to have delivered two gallons of gin to a prohibition agent, was held to the grand jury in bond of $1,000 yesterday by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker.

FARM LOAN BOARD LENIENT COLLECTOR, FARMERS ASSURED

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—A promise that the federal farm loan board would pursue a lenient collection policy was given in a letter made public today from President Hoover to Senator Frederick Steiwer [Rep., Ore.]. Answering an appeal for a "more humane treatment of farm debtors," the President wrote that at his direction the farm loan board had sent to all its member banks a letter of Commissioner Paul Bestor, which said:

"I have told the President that the banks are not pursuing a course of ruthless and drastic foreclosure. I have advised him that it is not the desire of the federal land banks to acquire farms and that in cases of delinquencies it is the policy of all banks to consider each case on its individual merits and to institute foreclosure proceedings only when investigation discloses that a debtor is not a capable farmer, is not making a real effort to meet his obligations to the full extent of his capacity, and is not likely to succeed if given a reasonable opportunity, or when there are other factors making it necessary to take action in the vital interests of the bank."

In commenting, the President wrote: "You will recognize that the banks must go through certain forms in cases of delinquencies to determine the cases honestly requiring relief, but perhaps our farmers who are in difficulty do not realize the sympathetic view and the endeavor we are making in their interest in these times."

NORRIS RESIGNS AS INVESTIGATOR OF FARM BOARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—The projected investigation of the federal farm board promised today to narrow down to an accounting inquiry, rather than one opening up the whole question of farm relief policy.

GEORGE W. NORRIS.

Senator George W. Norris [rad. Rep., Neb.], the one man most desirous of seeing the inquiry pushed to the full, announced that he did not intend to serve on the senate agricultural subcommittee which has the investigation in charge. Senator Norris was author of the resolution which authorized the inquiry. His resignation today was considered a final act of protest at the delay in getting started which he has several times openly blamed on Senator Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.], agricultural committee chairman and chairman of the subcommittee.

It was indicated by Senator McNary that, with Senator Norris out, the investigation would confine itself to a study of the farm board's record and accounts. The prospects are against a repetition of the dramatic hearings last fall in which senate critics of the board raked Chairman James C. Stone and other witnesses over the coals.

Senator McNary stated that he had not yet been officially informed of Senator Norris' withdrawal and was not yet ready, therefore, to say who would be named to fill the fifth place on the committee.

The committee will meet in executive session tomorrow to lay out its plan of campaign.

A Glorious Holiday without a care...

ALL EXPENSES $154.25 PERSONALLY ESCORTED

Sailings:
June to September

CRUISE to the heart of Old French Canada. We take you by rail to Toronto, Queen City of Canada, where your foreign adventure begins. You set sail on a luxurious steamer, one of the world's largest fresh water fleet. You will visit en route the metropolis of Montreal and the fortress city of Quebec, Gibraltar of North America.

You will cruise among the Thousand Islands—set like a thousand jewels in azure blue waters—experience the thrills of shooting the great St. Lawrence Rapids. Near Quebec you will pay your respects at the miracle shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupré and hear the thunder of Montmorency Falls, higher than Niagara.

Beyond Quebec the high Laurentians follow the St. Lawrence and you cruise in the shadow of these ancient mountains. The steamer puts in at fashionable Murray Bay, and quaint and lovely Tadoussac, Canada's oldest settlement. The glory of the Saguenay River, seen at sunset and again at dawn, is a spectacle to impress the most widely travelled. The wild grandeur of Trinity Bay, guarded by the tremendous capes, Trinity and Eternity—the ship's siren reverberating like giant laughter among the eternal hills—gives you a touch of the loneliness, austerity and beauty of the silent places.

A spirit of gaiety prevails for the entire journey, and there is not a dull moment on ship or shore. You dance to the music of a lively orchestra. Delicious meals satisfy ravenous appetites. You will vote this the best vacation ever.

Remember, every expense on this enjoyable cruise has been foreseen and included in the figure quoted above, as well as stop-overs at important hotels en route. A courteous escort relieves you of every travel worry.

ROOSEVELT AT HIS DESK AFTER BAY STATE VISIT

Think Breach with Ely May Be Bridged.

Albany, N. Y., July 18.—[Special.]—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt opened a drive to harmonize the Democratic ranks in Massachusetts today and came home this evening prepared to plunge into a series of important political parleys and to attack a mass of accumulated state governmental routine work.

E. M. HOUSE.

Motoring homeward from Little Boar's Head, N. H., after his week's yacht cruise, the governor first had a long talk at Beverly Farms, Mass., with Col. Edward M. House. He then slipped over to Swampscott to meet some of the leaders who fought him in the Bay state primary in which former Gov. Alfred E. Smith defeated him.

The governor's encounter with this group of moderate leaders of the opposing group was short but it appeared to be pleasant from the manner in which the principals exchanged farewells.

Fails to See Gov. Ely.

In fact, the harmony bid seemed to be making so much progress that at one period it was suggested that a meeting be arranged between Gov. Roosevelt and Gov. Joseph B. Ely, outstanding chieftain of the Massachusetts forces who backed former Gov. Smith to the limit at the Chicago convention. A hasty effort was made to reach Gov. Ely at his home at Westfield, Mass., but the conferees were unable to get him by telephone, so the plan to have Gov. Roosevelt motor home through Westfield and drop off to see Gov. Ely was abandoned.

While members of the governor's party admitted that much of the bitterness of the Chicago convention fight still remained as a sore spot to threaten a Hoover victory over the Democratic candidates in the Bay state in the fall, they insisted that today's conference and a generally indicated tendency of recent days supported their contention that the Massachusetts situation would iron itself out before the actual campaign began.

The governor made a rapid trip over the mountains to the executive mansion in the evening in order to meet Bernard M. Baruch, who was a dinner and overnight guest. As Mr. Baruch has always been connected with the group of so-called conservative figures in the Democratic party, the fact that he postponed a departure for Europe to discuss the campaign with the Democratic candidate was regarded as significant.

Gains Financier Adherents.

It was also said by members of the Roosevelt group that several important financial leaders who had been reported hostile to his election have now shown an inclination to back him openly and with their pocketbooks.

The latest to be linked in the messages to the Democratic candidate's advisers were Percy Rockefeller and Jackson Reynolds, both outstanding financial world figures.

Gov. Roosevelt's New England visit revealed several things clearly to him. One was that in states like New Hampshire and even Maine, which are normally Republican, he had a chance to capture the electoral votes. The crowd of 50,000 assembled by Robert Jackson, New Hampshire Democratic national committeeman, at Hampton Beach Sunday was viewed as substantiation of these claims. It was said to have been the largest crowd ever gathered for a political meeting in that portion of the country.

ASKS $1,294,000 INCREASE IN N. Y. POLICE BUDGET

Commissioner Blasts Tax Slash Hope.

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—While the new citizens' budget committee, of which Peter Grimm is chairman, was meeting today to consider a plan of attack upon mounting city expenses, it was disclosed at city hall that Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney is asking, for 1933, an increase of $1,294,190.94 over the $62,932,728.05 his department receives in the modified budget for this year.

COMMISSIONER MULROONEY.
[Acme Photo.]

In transmitting the estimate to the mayor the commissioner wrote that he had examined personally each item and reduced the total "to the minimum consistent with efficient police service."

At Budget Director Charles L. Kohler's office it was explained that $708,217 of the increase was for personal service and was mandatory under the law, and that $585,973 more of the increase was caused by the needs of the police pension fund.

The budget disclosed that six jobs had been eliminated, saving $18,560, one of those vacated being stenographer to the commissioner. The others were technical positions paying $3,000 and $3,500 annually. Another $16,027 was saved by reducing the employment of laborers hired on a per diem basis and $420 more was cut by reducing scheduled pay on two other jobs.

Apprehension was gaining among real estate owners that proposed assessments on sewage, additional fees for various service by the building and fire departments, and other ways of raising new city income would offset any economies in the 1933 departmental budgets.

LOCK BUTCHER IN ICE BOX.

Two bandits locked Louis Gries, butcher at 4450 Wentworth avenue, in his own refrigerator yesterday after robbing him of $178.

Admiral in Charge

Two hundred and fifty midshipmen of the Culver summer naval school arrived at the Union station yesterday and marched to the foot of Randolph street. There they went aboard the U. S. S. Wilmette, which steamed away on a five day cruise to Mackinac island and return. The young "middies" were under the command of Admiral Hugh Rodman, retired, director of the school, and Capt. O. W. Fowler, U. S. N., retired, head of the school.

Col. McCormick Speaks on National Network Tonight

Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak over a nation-wide network of National Broadcasting company radio stations tonight from 7 to 7:30 o'clock. The subject of Col. McCormick's address will be "Help Save Your Country." The program will be presented under the auspices of the National Organization for the Reduction of Public Expenditures. George W. Rossetter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce and general chairman of the national organization, will introduce Col. McCormick. More than twenty stations throughout the country will carry the program. WLS will be the only Chicago station carrying the speech.

Buckshot Hit Policemen Chasing Gangsters' Car

Policemen George E. Miller and Edward Henning of the Maxwell street station, received slight wounds early yesterday from buckshot fired from an automobile they were pursuing through west side streets. There were four men, believed to have been members of the "42" gang, in the fleeing car. The police started the chase at Loomis and Spruce streets and emptied their own revolvers before the gangsters' car finally eluded them near Harrison and Lytle streets.

SCOUTS RESCUE JAILER CAUGHT IN HIS OWN JAIL

Three Chicago Boy Scouts yesterday ventured into the detective bureau casting wary glances about them. Each had gained all the medals for scoutcraft and they were experts at finding the way out of the woods if lost.

Sergt. Thomas Walsh, secretary to Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker, led them about the bureau, swinging a big bunch of keys.

"Step into a cell," he invited his visitors, swinging open a door. Sergt. Walsh clanged the door upon himself, the three Scouts and six prisoners, who were in the cell. After the lapse of enough time to let the boys know how it felt to be locked up, the sergeant inserted a key in the lock. The key would not turn. For some reason the lock was out of order.

Sergt. Walsh was speechless for a while and then he began to shout and yell to the lockup keeper at the outer door who merely grinned. He was used to hearing shouts from the cells.

One of the boys finally found a window in the cell. Beyond it was a locked grating. One of the sergeant's keys opened the lock and all four escaped through the window.

Condition of Flo Ziegfeld Not Critical, Doctors Say

Hollywood, Cal., July 18.—[Special.]—Condition of Flo Ziegfeld, theatrical producer, who yesterday was brought from New Mexico to a hospital here, was pronounced "unchanged throughout the day." Two physicians last night called him "seriously, but not critically" ill. His illness followed a relapse from an attack of pleurisy.

FALL FATAL TO CHILD.

Rita O'Donnell, 3 years old, 308 South Wood street, died yesterday in the county hospital of a fracture of the skull suffered Sunday when she fell down and struck her head.

G. O. P. LAUNCHES DRIVE TO ELECT DOZEN SENATORS

Dickinson Is Here to Plan Midwest Campaign.

The preliminary work of the Republican party's campaign to elect twelve United States senators in the central states next fall was started yesterday by Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, keynoter at the national convention, who stopped off in Chicago for a few days before returning to his home.

Senator Dickinson is chairman of the senatorial committee for the central states, in which twelve Republican seats are at stake in the fall elections. The campaign, he said, will get under way Aug. 1, when he will return to the headquarters in the Palmer house.

"We're going to concentrate on the senatorial fights," said Keynoter Dickinson. "Where a senator is stronger in his state than the President, we'll expect him to carry the whole ticket, and vice versa."

Senator Dickinson said the prohibition question would be the principal issue in many states, the people having to decide whether the eighteenth amendment shall be repealed outright, as the Democrats desire, or replaced by another amendment giving congress control of the liquor traffic, the Republican solution.

"But there will be other issues in this campaign and it will be an argumentative one," said the senator. "Among them will be the economic question, sound money versus inflation, and adequate tariff protection. The people are more interested in politics this year than they have been and we look for a record vote."

Senator Dickinson made no prophesies as to the Republican party's chances, but said the candidates would all fight together as a family. Congressman Will F. Woods of Lafayette, Ind., he said, would be here in a few days to handle the campaign for seats in the house of representatives.

Chances for a dry third party in Illinois this year were discounted yesterday by George B. Safford, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league. He said the drys would concentrate their efforts toward electing a dry state senate.

"President Hoover undoubtedly possesses the confidence of a vast majority of the supporters of prohibition," said Mr. Safford.

At the Democratic state headquarters it was said the announcement of the time and place for the opening of the party's national campaign headquarters in Chicago would not be known for another ten days. Judge Henry Horner, the Democratic candidate for governor, returned from a week's yachting trip on the lakes and will begin his campaign in the central part of the state today, going first to Danville and then Champaign.

George Ackerson, former secretary to President Hoover and once managing editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, was selected yesterday as director of publicity for the Republican party in the eastern region.

Dear Sir:

As one officially interested in the promotion of public safety, I feel compelled to congratulate your company on the fine service it is rendering by using shatter-proof safety glass as standard equipment in all of your cars.

I earnestly hope that many other manufacturers of automobiles will find it possible to do the same fine thing in the public's interest before long.

Very truly yours,
Albert P. Fall
Director of Public Safety

Studebaker gives you SAFETY GLASS FREE all around in all models

IF for no other reason than its contribution of Safety Glass all around, Studebaker would stand out supremely among the motor cars of this year.

But Studebaker's interest in public safety has not stopped with offering positive protection against the perils of broken flying glass. Armor plated bodies, automatic starting, exceptionally low center of gravity, non-breakable steering wheels, no-glare windshields, reflex tail lights, extra large brakes, steel running boards and vastly finer Free Wheeling plus new fast-action Synchronized Shifting are among the other Studebaker safety measures.

Get a Studebaker and you get a car with the identical quality Safety Glass used by Pierce-Arrow and other cars in that price range. You get a car that in every detail is the year's utmost in value. Arrange for a trial drive in a Triumphant New Studebaker today!

SIGN WATERWAY PACT; CHICAGO PROTEST READY

Senate Committee to Take Up Inquiry.

boundary lake, being entirely within the borders of the United States.

In announcing the signing of the St. Lawrence treaty, President Hoover termed the seaway project "the greatest internal improvement yet undertaken on the American continent." He asserted completion of the waterway would redeem a promise which he had made to the people of the midwest many years ago. He said the waterway would have a profoundly favorable effect upon agriculture and industry throughout the middle western part of the country, while "the large by-product of power will benefit the northeast."

"The waterway," he said, "will probably require ten years for completion, during which time normal growth of traffic will far more than compensate for any diversions from railways and other port facilities. The economic gains from improved transportation have always benefited the whole people."

Contends Gulf Route Protected.

While the President did not call attention to the fact that one of his campaign pledges of four years ago was a successful lakes to the gulf waterway, he quoted army engineers as stating that the treaty would not adversely affect the gulf route.

He quoted Gen. MacArthur, acting secretary of war, as saying that the provisions for the diversion of water from Lake Michigan in the treaty are sufficient to provide for a nine foot waterway from Chicago to the Mississippi.

After admitting the United States had agreed to Canada's insistence on a two stage seaway, Mr. Hoover said: "The project is of first importance to the whole continent. The many and extremely complex engineering, legal, commercial and international problems have been worked out by the representatives of both countries in a spirit of coöperation of which all North America can be justly proud."

Cost Over Half Billion.

In brief the treaty calls for the expenditure in the future of approximately 400 million dollars on a partly completed waterway and power project whose total cost was estimated by engineers at 543 million dollars, but which will probably cost nearer a billion dollars before completed. Of the 400 million dollars yet to be expended the United States will furnish 258 million dollars and Canada 142 millions in round numbers. The United States pays the big bills now on the theory that Canada, through construction of the 128 million dollar Welland canal, should be given cash credit for that work.

The international section of waterway stretching from the outlet of Lake Ontario at Tibbets Point to the village of St. Regis at the head of Lake St. Francis is to be developed through the erection of two huge forty foot dams, one at Crysler Island and the other at Barnhart.

Divide Power Equally.

Two power houses are to be developed, one on either side of the international boundary. The total horse power to be developed, which amounts to 2,200,000, is to be equally divided.

The treaty provides also for the construction of compensating works in the St. Clair and Detroit rivers to restore and maintain the levels of the great lakes. Most of this cost, estimated at $4,000,000, will be borne by the United States. On the insistence of Canada no attempt was made to adjust the unequal division of power at Niagara where Canada now receives 36,000 cubic second feet and the United States 20,000. The unequal distribution was made in 1909 to compensate for a 10,000 cubic second diversion at Chicago. Although the diversion was cut almost to zero Canada refused to enter into a new agreement readjusting the Niagara power division.

In 1909 Secretary of State Root refused to permit the question of the Chicago diversion to be specifically mentioned in the treaty on the ground that Lake Michigan was solely domestic and in no way subject to any right by Canada. The present state department did not take the Niagara matter into consideration in limiting the Chicago diversion. It also threw overboard the Root view that Lake Michigan was a solely domestic lake.

Lines of Attack.

Publication of the treaty terms was the signal today for the opening of an immediate congressional attack on the treaty. All indications tonight were that the main targets of attack would be directed at the following provisions:

[1] The limitation placed on the Chicago water diversion.

[2] The section which provides that the United States shall finance virtually all the balance of the construction work both for navigation and power.

[3] The section which provides that about one-third of the more than 200 million dollars to be expended on the international section shall be utilized for the purchase of Canadian materials and for the employment of Canadian rather than American labor. In other words the United States not only furnishes the money through taxation and provides a market for Canadian products but also acts to relieve the Canadian unemployment problem.

Doubt U. S. Shipper Security.

4. The sections which are designed to safeguard use of the completed waterway by American shippers. These allow each nation sovereignty over all construction works built in its territory regardless of which country financed them. They are described as providing that each nation should have equal navigation rights over the waterway.

5. The circumstance that the treaty does not take into consideration the unequal division of electric power at Niagara.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis [Dem., Ill] charged late today that Secretary Stimson, in signing the treaty, had failed to keep a promise made to him to hold back the pact until after the election. Mr. Lewis attacked the sections limiting the Chicago water diversion, asserting it should not have been included in the treaty.

"Chicago and Illinois have had no hearings on a matter of vital importance to them," he said. "By what right should a treaty deprive them of the use of their own water for the sake of their own health and commerce? It was wholly unnecessary to make any reference whatsoever to the Chicago water diversion case in a treaty dealing with a waterway of international character."

State Department Statement.

In its statement describing the treaty the state department had this to say of the section limiting the Chicago diversion:

"Article VIII. of the treaty relates to the preservation of the levels of the great lakes system. This article provides that the diversion of water from the great lakes system through the Chicago drainage canal shall conform to the quantity provided under the decree of the Supreme court of the United States of April 21, 1930.

"The article further provides that in the event of the government of the United States proposing, in order to meet an emergency, an increase in the permitted diversion the matter shall be submitted to an arbitral tribunal of three members for decision. Each nation is to appoint one member, the third to be selected jointly.

"The United States army engineers stated that the quantity of water which the Supreme court authorizes the Chicago sanitary district to divert from the great lakes watershed is sufficient to maintain the operation of the nine foot canal from Chicago to the Mississippi river through the Illinois river."

Mississippi Valley Protest.

Spokesmen for the Mississippi Valley association in Washington today also made known their opposition to the diversion section. They took the position that adoption of the treaty would wreck the usefulness of the Illinois waterway. Their contention was that the safeguarding clause would not protect the waterway by furnishing the water diversion needed to make it successful.

The position taken by these spokesmen was that the Supreme court had given no consideration to the value of the diversion at Chicago in the maintenance of navigable conditions and increased channel depths of the Mississippi and Illinois rivers for the reason that the federal project for this improvement had not been adopted by congress at that time. It was argued that the Supreme court decree dealth only with the diversion at Chicago for sanitation reasons and for navigation of the Chicago harbor and thus left the way open for new legislation increasing the diversion for navigation.

In this connection it was recalled today that congress had directed the chief of engineers to prepare recommendations as to the amount of water needed for navigation on the Illinois river and render a report before 1933.

Cut in Water Boosts Costs.

Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers, said today that by use of slack water navigation, which means a multiplicity of locks and dams, a 1,500 foot diversion would be ample for the Illinois waterway.

In the senate ratification fight over the water diversion Wisconsin and the other lake states which for years fought any diversion at Chicago will be fighting shoulder to shoulder with Canadian provinces against Illinois and other Mississippi valley states. The Mississippi valley states are interested because of the ample proof shown in recent years of the value of the diversion in Mississippi river navigation.

U. S. to Employ Canadians.

As the treaty stands, it provides for an equal division of water in the international section for power purposes. This section is to be constructed under the authority of a temporary St. Lawrence international rapids section commission clothed with power to award contracts and see that construction work is completed.

So far as possible each nation is to handle the construction work on its side of the river. The United States is to expend, however, $215,492,000 of the $274,742,000 expended on this part of the St. Lawrence development. This means that about one-third of the American money will be spent on Canadian soil. On these Canadian works the commission must see that Canadian material and personnel are used.

"The amount of new funds which the United States will be called upon to spend is $257,292,000, for both navigation and power works. But from these costs must be deducted the realization from the disposal of the water power."

As Canada expects to sell its power installation to the province of Ontario for 100 millions, its actual cash outlay will be about $40,000,000.

Text of American-Canadian Treaty on St. Lawrence Waterway

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—The text of the American-Canadian treaty providing for construction of the St. Lawrence waterway follows:

The President of the United States of America and his majesty the king of Great Britain, Ireland, and the British dominions beyond the seas, emperor of India, in respect of the dominion of Canada,

Recognizing that the construction of a deep waterway, not less than 27 feet in depth, for navigation from the interior of the continent of North America, through the great lakes and the St. Lawrence river to the sea, with the development of the water-power incidental thereto, would result in marked and enduring benefits to the agricultural, manufacturing, and commercial interests of both countries; and Project Found Feasible.

Considering further that the project has been studied and found feasible by the international joint commission, the joint board of engineers, and by national advisory boards; and

Recognizing the desirability of effecting a permanent settlement of the questions raised by the diversion of waters from or into the great lakes system; and

Considering that important sections of the waterway have already been constructed; and

Taking note of the declaration of the government of Canada of its intention to provide, not later than the date of the completion of the deep waterway in the international section of the St. Lawrence river, for the completion of the new Welland ship canal, and of canals in the Soulanges and Lachine areas of the Canadian section of the St. Lawrence river which will provide essential links in the deep waterway to the sea; and

Taking note of the declaration of the government of the United States of its intention to provide, not later than the date of the completion of the deep waterway in the international section of the St. Lawrence river, for the completion of the works in the great lakes system above Lake Erie which will provide essential links in the deep waterways to the sea;

Plenipotentiaries Named.

Have decided to conclude a treaty for the purpose of ensuring the completion of the St. Lawrence waterway project, and for the other purposes aforesaid, and to that end have named as their respective plenipotentiaries:

The President of the United States of America;

Henry L. Stimson, secretary of state of the United States of America;

His majesty the king of Great Britain, Ireland and the British dominions beyond the seas, emperor of India, for the dominion of Canada;

The Hon. William Duncan Herridge, P. C., D. S. O., M. C., his envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary for Canada in the United States of America;

Who, after having communicated to each other their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

PRELIMINARY ARTICLE.

In the present treaty, unless otherwise expressly provided, the expression:

[a] "International joint commission" means the commission established pursuant to the provisions of the boundary waters treaty of 1909;

[b] "Joint board of engineers" means the board appointed pursuant to an agreement between the governments following the recommendation of the international joint commission, dated the 19th December, 1921, and the "final report of the joint board of engineers" means the report dated the 9th April, 1932;

[c] "Great lakes system" means Lakes Superior, Michigan, Huron, Erie, and Ontario, and the connecting waters, including Lake St. Clair;

[d] "St. Lawrence river" means the river known by that name and includes the river channels and the lakes forming parts of the river channels from the outlet of Lake Ontario to the sea;

[e] "International boundary" means the international boundary between the United States of America and Canada as established by existing treaties;

[f] International section" means that part of the St. Lawrence river through which the international boundary line runs and which extends from Tibbetts point at the outlet of Lake Ontario to the village of St. Regis at the head of Lake St. Francis;

Canadian Section Defined.

[g] "Canadian section" means that part of the St. Lawrence river which lies wholly within Canada and which extends from the easterly limit of the international section to the Montreal harbor;

[h] "Thousand Islands section" means the westerly portion of the international section extending from Tibbetts point to Chimney point;

[i] "International rapids section" means the easterly portion of the international section extending from Chimney point to the village of St. Regis;

[j] "Governments" means the government of the United States of America and the government of the dominion of Canada;

[k] "Countries" means the United States of America and Canada.

ARTICLE I.

With respect to works in the international section, Canada agrees, in accordance with the project described in the final report of the joint board of engineers,

[a] To construct, operate and maintain the works in the Thousand Islands section below Oak point;

[b] To construct, operate and maintain a side canal with lock opposite Crysler island;

[c] To construct the works required for rehabilitation on the Canadian side of the international boundary.

ARTICLE II.

With respect to works in the international section, the United States agrees, in accordance with the project described in the final report of the joint board of engineers;

[a] To construct, operate and maintain the works in the Thousand Island section above Oak Point;

[b] To construct, operate and maintain a side canal with locks opposite Barnhart island;

[c] To construct the works required for rehabilitation on the United States side of the international boundary.

ARTICLE III.

The high contracting parties agree to establish and maintain a temporary St. Lawrence international rapids section commission, hereinafter referred to as the commission, consisting of ten members, five to be appointed by each government, and to empower it to construct the works in the international rapids section included in the project described in the final report included in the works provided for in Articles I. and II. hereof, and excluding the power house superstructures, machinery and equipment required for the development of power] with each modification as may be agreed upon by the governments, out of funds which the United States hereby undertakes to furnish as required by the progress of the works, and subject to the following provisions:

[a] That the commission, in accordance with the provisions of Schedule A, attached to and made a part of this treaty, shall be given the powers that are necessary to enable it to construct the assigned works;

Home Labor to Be Used.

[b] That, in so far as is possible in respect to the works to be constructed by the commission, the parts thereof within Canadian territory, or an equivalent proportion of the total of the works, shall be executed by Canadian engineers and Canadian labor and with Canadian material; and, in so far as is possible, the remaining works shall be executed by United States engineers and United States labor and with United States material; and the duty of carrying out this division shall rest with the commission;

[c] That the parties may arrange for construction, in their respective territories, of such power house superstructures, machinery, and equipment as may be desired for the development of waterpower;

[d] That, notwithstanding the provisions of Article IX., the commission shall be responsible for any damage or injury to persons or property resulting from construction of the works by the commission or from maintenance or operation during the construction period;

[e] That, upon completion of the works provided for in this article, the parties shall maintain and operate the parts of the works situate in their respective territories.

ARTICLE IV.

The high contracting parties agree:

[a] That the quantity of water utilized during any daily period for the production of power on either side of the international boundary in the international rapids section shall not exceed one-half of the flow of water available for that purpose during such period;

[b] That, during the construction and upon the completion of the works provided for in Article III., the flow of water out of Lake Ontario into the St. Lawrence river shall be controlled and the flow of water through the international section shall be regulated so that the navigable depths of water for shipping in the harbor of Montreal and throughout the navigable channel of the St. Lawrence river below Montreal, as such depths now exist or may hereafter be increased by dredging or other harbor or channel improvements, shall not be lessened or otherwise injuriously affected.

ARTICLE V.

The high contracting parties agree that the construction of works under the present treaty shall not confer upon either of the high contracting parties proprietary rights, or legislative, administrative, or other jurisdiction in the territory of the other, and that the works constructed under the provisions of this treaty shall constitute a part of the territory of the country in which they are situated.

ARTICLE VI.

The high contracting parties agree that they may, within their own respective territories, proceed at any time to construct alternative canal and channel facilities for navigation in the international section or in waters connecting the great lakes, and that they shall have the right to utilize for this purpose such water as may be necessary for the operation thereof.

ARTICLE VII.

The high contracting parties agree that the rights of navigation accorded under the provisions of existing treaties between the United States of America and his majesty shall be maintained, notwithstanding the provisions for termination contained in any of such treaties, and declare that these treaties confer upon the citizens or subjects and upon the ships, vessels, and boats of each high contracting party, rights of navigation in the St. Lawrence river and the great lakes system, including the canals now existing or which may hereafter be constructed.

ARTICLE VIII.

The high contracting parties, recognizing their common interest in the preservation of the levels of the great lakes system, agree:

[A] 1. That the diversion of water from the great lakes system, through the Chicago drainage canal, shall be reduced by Dec. 31, 1938, to the quantity permitted as of that date by the decree of the Supreme court of the United States of April 21, 1930.

2. In the event of the government of the United States proposing, in order to meet an emergency, an increase in the permitted diversion of water, and in the event that the government of Canada takes exception to the proposed increase the matter shall be submitted, for final decision, to an arbitral tribunal, which shall be empowered to authorize, for such time and to such extent as is necessary to meet such emergency, an increase in the diversion of water beyond the limits set forth in the preceding subparagraph and to stipulate such compensatory provisions as it may deem just and equitable; the arbitral tribunal shall consist of three members, one to be appointed by each of the governments and the third, who will be the chairman, to be selected by the governments.

No Other Diversion Allowed.

[B] That no diversion of water other than the diversion referred to in paragraph [A] of this article from the great lakes system or from the international section to another watershed shall hereafter be made except by authorization of the international joint commission.

[C] That each government in its own territory shall measure the quantities of water which may at any point be diverted from or added to the great lakes system, and shall place the said measurements on record with the other government semi-annually.

[D] That, in the event of diversions being made into the great lakes sytem from watersheds lying wholly within the borders of either country, the exclusive rights to the use of waters equivalent in quantity to any waters so diverted shall, notwithstanding the provision of article IV, [A], be vested in the country diverting such waters, and the quantity of water so diverted shall be at all times available to that country for use for power below the point of diversion, so long as it constitutes a party of boundary waters.

[E] That compensation works in the Niagara and St. Clair rivers, designed to restore and maintain the lake levels to their natural range, shall be undertaken at the cost of the United States as regards compensation for the diversion through the Chicago drainage canal, and at the cost of Canada as regards the diversion for power purposes other than power used in the operation of the Welland canals; the compensation works shall be subject to adjustment and alteration from time to time as may be necessary, and as may be mutually agreed upon by the governments, to meet any changes effected in accordance with the provisions of this article in the water supply of the great lakes system above the said works, and the cost of such adjustment and alteration shall be borne by the party effecting such change in water supply.

ARTICLE IX.

The high contracting parties agree:

[A] That each party is hereby released from responsibility for any damage or injury to persons or property in the territory of the other, which may be caused by any action authorized or provided for by this treaty.

[B] That they will severally assume responsibility and expense for the acquisition of any lands or interests in land in their respective territories which may be necessary to give effect to the provisions of this treaty.

ARTICLE X.

This treaty shall be ratified in accordance with the constitutional methods of the high contracting parties. The ratifications shall be exchanged in Washington or in Ottawa as soon as practicable and the treaty shall come into force on the day of the exchange of ratifications.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed this treaty in duplicate and have hereunto affixed their seals.

Done at the city of Washington the eighteenth day of July in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-two.

SCHEDULE A.

St. Lawrence International Rapids Section commission.

[A] The commission, established under the provisions of article III. of this treaty, shall function solely as an international commission established under, and controlled by, the terms of this treaty. It shall not be subject, generally, to the legislative, to the executive or, except as hereinafter provided, to the judicial authorities in either country, but it shall be subject to this and to any subsequent agreement.

[b] The modifications referred to in Article III. of this treaty shall be regarded as effective when confirmed by an exchange of notes by the governments.

[c] The commission shall have power to establish orders, rules or by-laws, and such orders, rules or by-law, together with any amendments, modifications or repeals thereof, shall be effective on confirmation by an exchange of notes by the governments.

Plans Open for Inspection.

[d] The governments shall be entitled to inspect the plans, proposals or works under construction, and to inspect and audit the books and other records of the commission.

[e] In order to enable the commission effectively to perform the duties imposed upon it by this treaty, it is agreed that the appropriate authorities in the countries will take such action as may be necessary to confer upon the commission the following capacities, powers and liabilities:

1. All such specific capacities, powers and liabilities as are reasonably ancillary to the establishment of the commission and the duties and functions imposed upon it by this treaty; the subsequently enumerated capacities, powers, and liabilities are not intended to restrict the generality of this clause;

2. The capacity to contract, to sue and be sued in the name of the commission;

Freedom from Liability.

3. Freedom from liability for the members of the commission for the acts and liabilities of the commission and, conversely, a general responsibility of the commission for the acts of itself, its employés and agents, in the same manner as if the commission were a body corporate, incorporated under the laws of either of the countries;

4. The power to obtain the services of engineers, lawyers, agents and employés generally;

5. The power to make the necessary arrangements for workmen's compensation either directly or with the appropriate authorities or agents in either country, so as to insure to workmen and their families rights of compensation equivalent to those which they would ordinarily receive in the province of Ontario in respect to the parts of the works within Canadian territory, or the equivalent works as referred to in Article III. [b] of this treaty, or in the state of New York in respect to the remaining works.

Subject to Courts.

[f] The commission shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the federal courts of the two countries, respectively, that is to say, in respect to all questions arising out of the part of the works within Canadian territory or the equivalent works, as referred to in Article III. [b] of this treaty, the commission shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the Exchequer court of Canada, and, in respect to the remaining works, to the jurisdiction of the federal courts of first instance in the United States; and there shall also be established rights of appeal, analogous to the appeals in similar matters from the respective courts to the appropriate tribunals in the respective countries: Provided, however, that in respect of a claim made upon the commission exceeding in amount the sum of fifty thousand dollars [$50,000], either of the governments, at any time after such claim has been tried and judgment entered in the appropriate court of first instance herein provided for, may cause the matter to be referred by way of appeal to an arbitral tribunal. Such reference shall be effected by notice from the government invoking this proviso to the other government and to the court, given within ninety days of the entry of such judgment, and such notice shall give to the tribunal jurisdiction over the appeal, or cause any appeal already taken to be transferred to the tribunal. The tribunal shall consist of three members, all of whom must hold, or have held, high judicial office. One shall be appointed by each government and the third shall be selected by the two members so appointed; or, in the event of failure to agree, by the governments jointly. The tribunal so established shall then have, in respect to such claim, exclusive final jurisdiction and its findings shall be binding upon the commission.

[g] In view of the need for coördination of the work undertaken by the commission and the development of power in the respective countries, the commission shall have authority:

1. To make contracts with any agency in either country which may be authorized to develop power in the international section, for the engineering services necessary for the designing and construction of the power works;

2. To defer such parts of the power works as need to be constructed in conjunction with the installation of power house machinery and equipment, and to make contracts with any agency in either country which may be authorized to develop power, for constructing such deferred parts of the power works.

[h] The remuneration, general expenses and all other expenses of the members of the commission shall be regulated and paid by their respective governments and all other expenses of the commission shall be defrayed out of the funds provided under the terms of Article III. of this treaty.

Right of Entry Provided.

[i] The governments agree:

1. To permit the entry into their respective countries within the area immediately adjacent to the international section, to be delimited by an exchange of notes by the governments, of personnel employed by the commission, and to exempt such personnel from their immigration laws and regulations within such area;

2. To exempt from customs duties, excise or sales taxes or other imposts, all supplies and material purchased by the commission in either country for its own use.

[j] The commission shall continue until its duties under Article III. of this treaty have been completely performed. The governments may, at any time, reduce its numbers, provided that there must remain an even number of members with the same number appointed by each government. Upon completion, arrangements will be made for the termination of the commission and the bringing to an end of its organization by agreement between the governments.

N. Y. BROKER SUED FOR $46,987 BY BRITTEN; FRAUD IS CHARGED

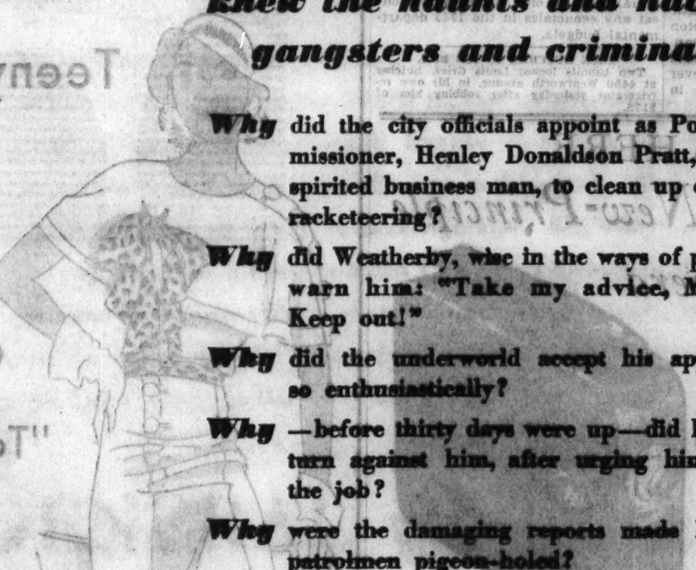
New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Eight members of the brokerage firm of Harriman & Co. were named defendants in a suit filed in the Supreme court today by Representative Fred A. Britten of Chicago, chairman of the house naval affairs committee, who charged that they sold him $48,987.50 in stock under "false and fraudulent representations."

The representative charges that between April, 1928, and November, 1929, he purchased 3,000 shares of Southern Dairies corporation "B" stock on the strength of the defendants' assurance that the Southern Dairies organization was to be bought by the Kraft Cheese corporation. This deal, the brokers promised him according to the complaint, would send the value of his stock upward.

McDonnell and Lebitt, counsel for the defendants, today filed a motion for a bill of particulars. The defendants named are Henry W. Bull, Oliver Harriman, G. Bowie Chipman, George F. Brennan, Christopher W. Kary, Elliot Buffington, William G. Jones Jr., and William J. Cunningham.

CHARLES FRANCIS COE'S

SHOW-DOWN



When every policeman in town knew the haunts and habits of gangsters and criminals—

Why did the city officials appoint as Police Commissioner, Henley Donaldson Pratt, a public-spirited business man, to clean up crime and racketeering?

Why did Weatherby, wise in the ways of politicians, warn him: "Take my advice, Mr. Pratt. Keep out!"

Why did the underworld accept his appointment so enthusiastically?

Why —before thirty days were up—did his friends turn against him, after urging him to take the job?

CANAL OFFICIALS CALL WATERWAY TREATY 'UNFAIR'

Attack Clause Limiting Diversion Here.

Officials of the sanitary district yesterday expressed regret that the treaty with Canada for the St. Lawrence waterway, limiting diversion at Chicago according to the 1930 Supreme court decree, had been signed, and called it "unfair to the middle west and to the United States."

One official said that Canada, "having taken Uncle Sam's shirt in the 1909 boundary waters treaty, is now going after his pants."

Seen Peril to Navigation.

Although the sanitary district experts had read only abstracts of the treaty, the provision for retention of the ultimate 1,500 cubic feet diversion clause, except during emergencies, when the United States might increase the flow at Chicago, was attacked on the ground that it would endanger navigation in the Illinois waterway as well as sanitation.

"Such a treaty is unfair to this part of the country and to the United States," said Attorney Edmund D. Adcock, special counsel for the district in the diversion case. "The question of diverting water at Chicago is a domestic one, something with which Canada has nothing to do, for Lake Michigan is not an international water. This position was taken by Elihu Root, one of the greatest international lawyers who ever lived, in 1909, when the boundary waters treaty was concluded.

Tells Provision of Treaty.

"Under that treaty Canada secured the right to divert 36,000 cubic second feet at Niagara falls for power purposes, while the United States secured only 20,000 feet. This was in consideration of granting this country the right to divert 10,000 feet at Chicago. Thus we are simply giving away something we already had. Canada also secured the right to divert 6,000 feet through the Welland canal, also principally for power purposes, in that treaty."

Besides the question of domestic rights, the diversion clause was attacked on the ground that it would menace navigation in the Illinois waterway by Attorney William Rothman, chief counsel for the district.

5,000 Foot Diversion Needed.

"For the purpose of successful operation of the lakes to gulf waterway, now nearing completion, a diversion of 5,000 feet will be necessary," said Mr. Rothman. "Successfully to operate the waterway with a smaller quantity of water would necessitate the construction of an elaborate system of dams, locks and other works in the lower section of the Illinois river, at a cost which would be great, if not prohibitive."

Mr. Rothman said the belief that 5,000 feet will be required for navigation purposes, shared by all the sanitary district engineers, was expressed by Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers, during the hearings before Special Master Charles E. Hughes on the lake diversion cases.

A conference of the principal industrial leaders and shippers of the Mississippi valley will be called in the near future, Samuel M. Hastings, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association said, to discuss the diversion section of the treaty.

"The total cost of the Illinois waterway amounts to about $97,500,000," said Mr. Hastings. "Of this, Chicago spent $70,000,000 for construction of the sanitary district canal, which serves the dual purpose of providing sanitation for the city and a connecting link for the waterway, so that it is quite essential that there should be a sufficient guarantee as to adequate diversion."

THE NEW DEEP SEAWAY

The proposed treaty seaway will have a length of 131 miles. Two dams, one near the upper rapids and one near the lower rapids, will aid navigation and provide power developments. The total cost will be $543,000,000, including that now expended. The work will include developments as far west as Detroit (1) where compensating works must be built in the St. Clair river. The Welland canal (2) already provides passage around Niagara Falls and (3) and (4) are the points where the power projects will be constructed.

INSULL GOES TO PARIS CONCERTS; SHUNS BUSINESS

Samuel Insull, once ruler of Chicago's public utilities as well as those in many other sections of America, has shunned all business activities since his arrival in Paris on June 21, according to reports in Chicago yesterday. Insull, whose unostentatious arrival in Paris was told exclusively in THE TRIBUNE, is living with his wife at the Prince de Galles hotel.

The former utility magnate occupies a suite of two rooms, which costs him about $10 a day. His wife's maid has a room in the servants' quarters.

Insull, whose only income is reported to be the pension of $18,000 a year voted to him by three of his former Chicago companies, has been seen at several concerts and theatrical performances in Paris. The Insulls seldom dine at their hotel, taking their meals instead at less expensive restaurants. Insull is reported to have become rather nervous and irritable.

ORDER 11 POLICE SUSPENDED IN 3D DEGREE QUIZ

Picked Out of Lineup by Complainants.

New York, July 18.—(AP)—Eleven Long Island policemen were suspended tonight at the conclusion of an inquiry into the death of Hyman Stark, alleged victim of a brutal "third degree."

The 11 suspended had been picked out of a lineup by three men arrested with Stark. They said the officers handcuffed them to chairs, beat them with rubber hose, kicked them and dragged them about by the hair.

Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink, who presided over the John Doe hearing to fix the responsibility for Stark's death, announced he would render a decision tomorrow morning.

The justice said he had two decisions to make. The first was whether a crime had been committed, and the second was whether the perpetrator had been identified.

The 11 men suspended included four who had been ordered held incommunicado as material witnesses earlier in the day. These four were paroled in custody of the police chief. Two others were suspended yesterday. These were Deputy Chief Frank Tappen, who was in charge of the detectives last Friday when Stark died, and Detective Joseph Hizenski, son of the woman whom Stark and his companions were alleged to have beaten in a robbery.

An implication that Tappen might have been responsible for Stark's death was given tonight by Martin W. Littleton Jr., assistant district attorney. He testified that Tappen approached him at headquarters late Friday afternoon mopped his brow and remarked:

"He's the toughest I've ever seen. I put one foot on his stomach and one on his throat and rocked back and forth and it didn't feaze him."

Tappen, who weighs more than 200 pounds and who limped from a sprained ankle, denied emphatically he had had such a conversation with Littleton or that he ever had treated a prisoner in such a manner.

Isse Stein, one of Stark's companions, wore a blood-stained shirt into the courtroom tonight. In a hoarse voice he picked seven detectives out of a lineup of 21 stretching the length of the crowded courtroom as the questioners who had beaten him, and then said there were three others. Three more detectives, including Hizenski, were brought in, and Stein said they were his assailants.

Both Philip Cacalo and Alex Drangel, the other suspects, had black eyes. They, too, picked detectives out of the lineup and accused them of brutalities.

OLD FIRE HORSE DIES TRUE TO HIS SCOTCH NAME

Sandy, Evanston's Scotch garbage-wagon horse, died yesterday as he had lived—economically.

It was nearly thirty years ago when Sandy was taken into the city's service. He was put to work drawing a fire engine. His descent in the equine scale to the prosaic scavenging business came when fire engines were motorized.

During all those years firemen and garbagemen marveled at the way Sandy saved feed. It was said he looked reproachfully at the city employé who gave him more than a pint of oats and one forkful of hay for a meal.

But as he had grown old and feeble and even a little feed was too much to give him, it was decided yesterday to kill Sandy. He was led up to the incinerator where he went so often with kitchen leavings. A policeman pointed a pistol at the horse and was about to shoot when Sandy tottered and fell down, sighing contentedly, and died. He had saved the city of Evanston one bullet.

U. S. DRY AGENT FAILS TO APPEAR TO FACE CHARGE

Alexandria Bay, N. Y., July 18.—(AP)—Bourke Bornemann, prohibition agent of Syracuse, N. Y., arrested on a charge of reckless driving as an outgrowth of recent hostility here between villagers and enforcement officers, failed to appear tonight at a scheduled arraignment.

The hearing was called for 7 p. m. When Bornemann had not appeared at 8 o'clock, Justice of the Peace Charles Trickey adjourned court and announced he would look up the penalty for contempt of his court.

He announced, however, that Bornemann would be given another chance to appear. His arraignment was postponed until Friday night at 7 o'clock.

Bornemann was arrested last Friday night after the second of a series of disorders attending recent dry raids here. His automobile was alleged to have injured two spectators in a crowd at a raid Thursday night. At the same time a stone hurled in the agents' direction injured a boy.

The previous Tuesday night two agents were beaten by a mob during a raid.

BANDITS LOCK UP 7 VICTIMS.

Three bandits held up the butcher shop of Andrew Steinke at 7173 West Grand avenue yesterday, robbed him of $295, and locked him, four employés and two customers in a storeroom.

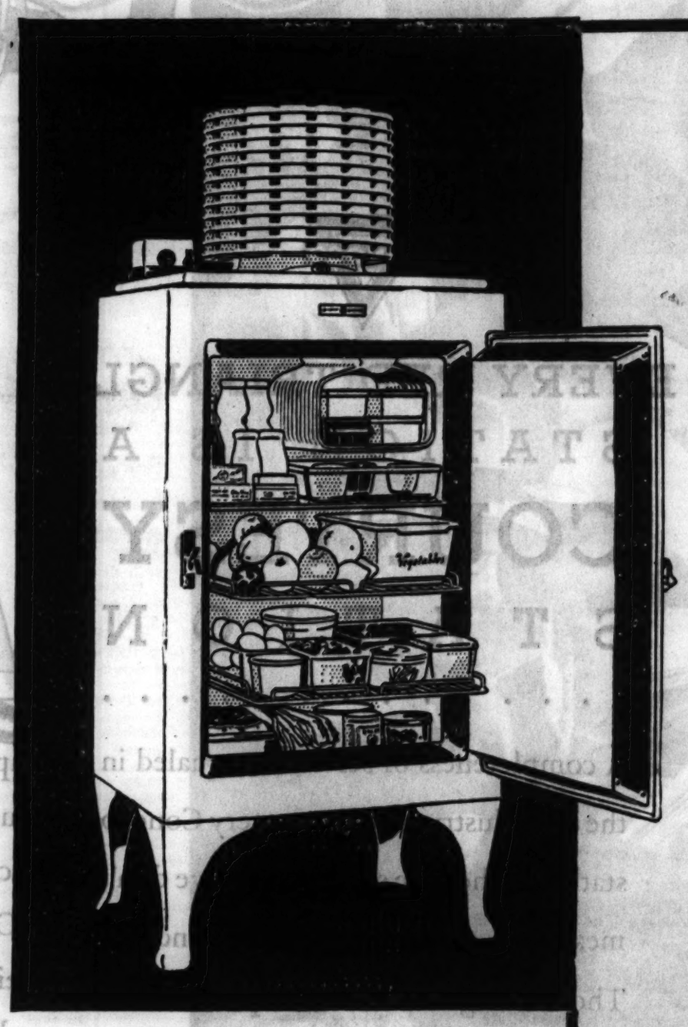
Beware of "cheap" refrigeration



Shelves that slide in and out easily—like a drawer • Maximum usable shelf space • FREE COOLING—no fans, belts, pulleys or other troublesome parts.

RESIST the momentary lure of a cheap price tag and avoid years of regret. This timely warning is prompted by the experience of thousands who bought cheap refrigerators and found the operating expense so high that it was necessary to replace them with low-cost, dependable General Electric refrigerators. In a short period of five weeks this spring our sales revealed the following:

Original cost of "prominent" refrigerators replaced by General Electric in Chicago and vicinity	$37,325.00
Salvage value after refrigerators had been in use for an average of 2 years and 9 months	3,037.00
Total loss to original purchasers	$34,288.00

These buyers would not have suffered one cent of loss had they purchased General Electric Refrigerators in the first place. Let General Electric protect your investment, first with trouble-free refrigeration and second with the four year service plan.

Have adequate refrigeration to handle the summer overload. Be free from refrigeration worries and annoying need of oiling machinery, both summer and winter. Profit by the experience of others. Protect your refrigeration investment. Decide on G-E in the first place.

It's as easy to buy a General Electric refrigerator with its exclusive features as it is to pay for a cheap refrigerator. And when you finish paying for your General Electric you don't have to begin paying service bills.

Beware of cheap refrigeration. Hundreds of cases prove that you will be money ahead in the long run. Phone Franklin 5720 and get the facts from authorities before deciding to buy any refrigerator.

HUMAN NATURE AND THE AUTOMOBILE

THE man who liked the comfort and quiet and interior spaciousness of a big car in 1929 still likes the same things today.

The man who liked the power, the steadiness, the stability of a heavy car in 1929 perhaps feels a little pride about sacrificing all this today.

The people who bought 23 million cars in the past seven years still want the thrill of fine performance.

Human nature hasn't changed—but buying power has.

It is up to the automobile industry, if it wishes to replace today's 23 million cars with 23 million more in the next seven years—to build a car which will give people something new in performance, something on terra firma akin to flying—"terraplaning" say—at a price which they can now pay.

In other words—what the public wants and car makers will have to produce is a totally new type of car, fitted alike to people's tastes and pocketbooks.

One of these days Hudson-Essex will announce such a car.

HALF OF LOOP TAXES FOR 1930 REMAINS UNPAID

List Delinquents on North Bank of River.

Of thirty million dollars of 1930 tax money due in the loop, less than half has been paid to date. This was announced yesterday by County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonough.

For three days THE TRIBUNE has published lists of taxpayers delinquent on tax bills of more than $10,000. No taxpayer has been included in the published lists, however, who has paid 50 per cent or more of the bill. The lists of delinquent loop taxes thus published totaled more than $4,000,000.

If the $4,000,000 were paid it would provide urgently needed funds to meet immediate pay rolls, officials said. The remaining $11,000,000 due on partial payments and amounts less than $10,000 would meet pay rolls of the various governments for more than a month.

A list of properties on which the 1930 levies are more than $10,000 and on which less than half has been paid, as shown in volume No. 479 of the treasurer's office, which covers the area on the north bank of the Chicago river in the northtown, follows:

THE TRIBUNE Sunday listed the Standard Oil company, 910 South Michigan avenue, as paying no portion of a $131,389.43 tax. The company has paid $82,135.46 of the tax, leaving a balance of $49,252.97. The balance is being contested and will be settled as soon as a decision on the court battle is reached. Out of a total of $366,935.79 in taxes the company has paid $295,220.75. The balance is under protest.

The emergency call of 10,000 suits against delinquent taxpayers to be heard by Circuit Judge Craig A. Hood, will open Aug. 1.

In an early issue THE TRIBUNE will publish a list of delinquent taxpayers in the gold coast area.

$165,787 JUDGMENT FOR BACK TAXES HITS AQUITANIA BUILDING

Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel yesterday entered a $165,787 judgment against the Aquitania Building corporation and ruled that the county claim for taxes delinquent during the years 1924, 1925, and 1926 was a first lien against the property. After entering the judgment Judge Gentzel instructed the special county attorney, William Capesius, to draw an order of foreclosure. The building, a $3,000,000 structure at 832 Argyle street, will be put up for sale to satisfy the taxes within two weeks.

Since 1926 the Aquitania has been in the hands of a bondholders' committee and the 1927, 1928, and 1929 taxes have been paid. The judgment represents the delinquency in the three prior levies plus $53,000 accrued penalty. The bondholders may appeal Judge Gentzel's order of yesterday. In that event they must post a bond equal to double the amount of the judgment.

Nearly a year ago the county's special attorneys filed suit asking the appointment of a receiver to sequester the income and pay taxes. Judge Gentzel heard this plea and appointed the receiver, literally "putting the county into the landlord business." His ruling was appealed, however, and the Appellate court court held that since the building already was in foreclosure under a first mortgage no receiver could be appointed for the county. This reversal recently was sustained by the Supreme court.

GREENLAND ROW IS RESUBMITTED TO WORLD COURT

OSLO, Norway, July 18.—(AP)—Norway today submitted her dispute with Denmark about eastern Greenland to the world court at The Hague.

The southeastern tip of Greenland has been in dispute between the two countries for several years, and recently the trouble was submitted to The Hague court.

On July 13 Norway announced she was going to occupy another area, a two mile strip. Today's development apparently indicated that Norway is resubmitting the issue.

OFFER NEW WAY OF FIGURING OUT PERSONALTY TAX

Fairweather Group Gives Result of Studies.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Because of the uncertainty and confusion among the people of Cook county in the valuation of personal property for taxing purposes, the joint tax commission has issued an extensive study and report on that subject Its chairman, George O. Fairweather, recommended a method of assessment yesterday to the county board and also explained the plan at a luncheon of the Chicago Bar association.

Under the previous unsatisfactory régime in tax assessing, about 250,000 personalty tax schedules were sent out to citizens, approximately 50,000 assessments were placed on the books, and usually between 25,000 and 30,000 paid something as a personal property tax.

Schedules Are Mailed Out.

Under the new plan, County Assessor Jacobs will mail out 750,000 schedules and predicts he will make 675,000 assessments. With the exception of automobiles, Mr. Jacobs has not promulgated any rules to date, officially, for valuing personal property. Mr. Fairweather suggested a method yesterday.

The owners of household furniture will constitute the largest group of personal property tax payers. Mr. Fairweather's suggestion on this item, which is No. 34 in the personal property tax schedule, is as follows:

"Under household articles include furniture [unless listed separately under other items] and also household utensils and equipment. There is a large depreciation in the sale of these items. Some studies indicate a 10 per cent relation between the value of a residence, building or house of the property owner and the value of the household goods. For example, a house valued at $10,000 might reasonably be expected to contain household furnishings of a value of $1,000.

Month's Rent Is Gauge.

"Other studies have indicated that a year's rent is equivalent to a fair value of household goods. For example, a tenant at $50 a month might reasonably be expected to own household furnishings worth $600.

"These averages or general results would be subject in addition to further allowances for depreciation due to age and condition. An approximate rule for such depreciation indicates a deduction of a third of the purchase price plus 10 per cent for each year for the first three years, and 5 per cent for each year for the succeeding five years, with a maximum depreciation of not to exceed 75 per cent of the replacement value.

"For example, a house valued at $40,000 might on the above approximation be expected to have household equipment reasonably worth originally $4,000. If the average life of this equipment was at least 10 years, thus entitling the owner to the maximum depreciation of 75 per cent, the present net available value becomes $1,000, and the assessed value after equalization [using the 37 per cent factor] becomes $370, and the tax at a 6 per cent rate produces $22.20.

Only a General Rule.

"This illustration should be taken merely as a rough general guide. With respect to office furniture the recommendation is to use the book value less from 30 to 40 per cent."

Applying the Fairweather suggestion to the householder who pays $50 a month rent, his taxes would be $3.33, assuming his furniture is 10 years old. The man with $100 rent would pay twice as much in personal taxes with furniture of the same age.

The most frequent appeal to THE TRIBUNE for aid has related to money in a bank. The assessment under consideration is that for 1931, and the assessor has asked owners of savings deposits to list the amounts they have in the bank.

Originally Assessor Jacobs intimated that he was not going to place an assessment against money in the bank, but his attorney is said to have advised him that such a public declaration would place the validity of the assessment in jeopardy. So no authoritative statement has been issued by Mr. Jacobs on this point.

The assessment of money in banks in other localities has driven the money out of the jurisdiction of the assessor. Mr. Fairweather's organization has made a study to determine at what rate money in banks will take flight. Accordingly he recommended to persons with cash in banks a method of listing it for taxation. On this point, his pamphlet reads:

"Money of banks and money belonging to domestic corporations is not assessible as such, being one of the elements going to make up the assessible value of capital stock.

"In other jurisdictions where moneys are taxed as property, an effective rate on the average of 2.2 mills is employed. This rate does not tend to precipitate the flight of deposits from one jurisdiction to another. For purposes of comparison only, a similar result in Cook county would be had under local rates and equalization factor, on a basis of 10 per cent. For example, at a $6 rate and the 37 per cent equalization factor, the use of this percentage would produce a tax of $2.22 per $1,000."

COURT O. K.'S 4,800 TAX ERROR WRITS; CUTS VALUATIONS

A total of 4,800 writs of error reducing the assessed valuations upon as many properties for the 1928 and 1929 tax levy, were approved yesterday by County Judge Jarecki.

The writs were prepared by Assessor J. L. Jacobs and represented the last of those approved by the old board of assessors. Judge Jarecki refused to approve 48 writs which Assessor Jacobs indicated represented no error. Most of the errors were for small amounts, the largest being $200 and the least amounting to 63 cents.

An additional window was opened in the office of County Treasurer McDonough yesterday to accommodate the increasing number of taxpayers taking advantage of the installment plan of paying taxes.

The deadline for the payment of the first installment of 25 per cent is July 25, with the balance to be paid in three equal installments at 60 day intervals. Under the plan taxpayers are charged only one-half of the usual penalty of 1 per cent a month on delinquent bills.

STATE, COUNTY JOIN IN MOVE TO JAIL SAMMONS

Detectives yesterday searched in vain for James "Fur" Sammons, known to the police as a machine gun maniac who on Saturday, by order of Judge Edward D. Shurtleff of McHenry county, walked from a courtroom to freedom.

State's Attorney John A. Swanson ordered an investigation of the "slip" which enabled Sammons to be at large. He also ordered an appeal from Judge Shurtleff's order and it was said this appeal would be made jointly with one to be made by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom.

Assistant State's Attorney Euclid Taylor has been assigned to look up old records and see what additional charges can be placed against Sammons if he is captured.

Taylor said he would also inquire why Judge Shurtleff of McHenry county, whose present term expires in June, 1933, accepted jurisdiction of a criminal sent to prison from Cook county.

JUDGES WORKING IN TEAMS SPEED JUSTICE 50 PCT.

Sonsteby Plan Makes Good in First Trial.

The machinery of justice moved at an accelerated pace yesterday in the civil division of Municipal court when the new system devised by Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby had its first test, with the judges working in pairs.

JUDGE SONSTEBY.

Under the Sonsteby system one judge occupies the bench, hears the court call and preliminary evidence, and passes on the cases ready for trial to a second judge, who is in chambers. The test was made in the renters' court, debtors' court, small claims court and bond court.

Increase Speed 50 Per Cent.

At 2:30 p. m., with the day's grist of cases almost completed, Judge Sonsteby made a survey which, he said, indicated that plaintiffs, defendants, witnesses, lawyers, and the judges themselves were entirely satisfied. Court records indicated that the number of cases disposed of had increased fifty per cent.

In general, Judge Sonsteby said, the results were such as to warrant a continuance of the system through the summer and into the autumn.

The assignment sheet found the judges lined up as follows: Branch 3, Debtors' court, Judges Eberhardt and Elliott; branch 8, Citations and Confessions court, Judge Rooney and Holmes; branch 10, Nonjury court, Judges Haas and Hartigan; branch 11, Small Claims court, Judges Casey and Lyle; branch 12, Small Claims, Judges Borrelli and Fetzer.

Absences Cause Hitches.

The machinery was slowed up somewhat when Judge Lyle telephoned from a Michigan summer resort that he would be unable to return today. Again it hesitated when Judge Rooney departed early to attend a funeral.

Adjustments were made, however, with Judge Casey conducting court alone and Judge Fairbank filling in for Judge Rooney after his departure.

The change was made possible by the recess of jury courts for the summer. The plan will be continued in the fall, Judge Sonsteby said, by abolishing four of the eight jury courts.

MOVE TO RENAME CLARK ST. DRAWS ALDERMEN'S FIRE

Fight Proposal to Call It Broadway.

North side business men urged a council subcommittee on traffic and public safety yesterday to change the name of North Clark street, south of Diversey avenue, to Broadway, because portions of Clark street, they asserted, have "an unsavory reputation." Aldermen retorted that as a center of the show business and racketeering night clubs New York's Broadway, for which the Chicago thoroughfare is named, hardly has an odor of lilies and sweet green pastures.

ALD. COUGHLIN.

The proposal before the committee is to continue the name of Broadway, now terminating at Diversey parkway, down Clark street to Archer avenue, along that street to Wentworth avenue, on Wentworth avenue to Vincennes avenue, and on that street to the city limits at 138th street.

Foes of Change Are Heard.

Defenders of the names of George Rogers Clark, who won Illinois from the British, of "Long John" Wentworth, early Chicago mayor, and of old Vincennes, a historic spot in the early days of the middle west, all appeared to protest against the slight on their memories which would come from replacing their names with Broadway.

Ald. John Coughlin [1st] expressed resentment over remarks on the "unsavory reputation" of Clark street. He pointed out that Chicago's two largest banks, the federal building, a number of theaters, and several large hotels have entrances upon the street. He read the subcommittee a resolution by the city planning and streets committees of the City club, opposing the name change and asserting that no advantage would come of it.

A Slap at Broadway.

"As long as you talk about Clark street not having a savory name," said Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], "remember the associations with Broadway are not exactly sanctimonious. The name connotes chorus girls and the like."

"Next to Lincoln, the name of George Rogers Clark has the finest historical associations of any name in the middle west," said Mrs. Julia Goodhue, historian of the Illinois department of the G. A. R.

Ald. O. E. Northrup [19th], whose ward embraces a large section of Vincennes avenue which would be changed to Broadway under the proposal, objected to the change both on historical and commercial grounds. The next step, he asserted, would be to make the new Broadway a through street, for which it is not fitted because of its narrowness and heavy street car traffic. He asserted that the change would route trade away from merchants in his ward into the downtown district.

The committee adjourned until Thursday without voting on the matter.

Freak Shot Perils Life of Head of Bacardi Rum Firm

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 18.—(AP)—Facundo Bacardi, president of the firm which makes the famous Bacardi rum, was in serious condition today from an accidentally inflicted bullet wound. Last night he was joking with a policeman and the officer's gun slipped out of his hand, exploding as it fell. Señor Bacardi was wounded in the stomach.

TURKEY TAKES SEAT AS 56TH MEMBER OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

GENEVA, July 18.—(AP)—Membership in the league of nations was raised to 56 today when Turkey took her seat. She is the last of the nations which were on the German side in the war to become a member of the league.

The way for the Ankora government was cleared recently when Tewfik Rushdi Bey, foreign minister, announced at the general disarmament conference that his government was awaiting an invitation to membership.

"The Turkish government sincerely supports the principles of international conduct set forth in the 'covenant,'" he added. "Turkey has no secret alliances with any country."

Secret alliances are forbidden by the covenant. In some quarters there had been a suspicion that a secret treaty existed between Turkey and Russia.

The new member will seek a seat on the league council but has indicated that she will not insist that it be permanent.

Kemal Hasnu Bey, the minister to Berne, took the league seat for his government. Turkey's entry leaves the United States, Brazil, and soviet Russia the only important governments where are not members of the league.

BRAZIL'S TROOPS TAKE 3 TOWNS IN DRIVE ON REBELS

Peruvian Loyalists Nip New Revolt.

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 18.—(AP)—With President Getulio Vargas himself in the field, the federal forces of Brazil today initiated a minor offensive against the rebels of the state of Sao Paulo.

In the course of a short advance into Sao Paulo from the state of Rio de Janeiro, three towns were taken and airplanes bombed the air fields of Sao Paulo city, the capital of the state. Several rebel casualties were reported in the day's fighting.

Federal forces captured Formoso, fifteen miles south of federal headquarters at Rezende, Rio de Janeiro state, and the Sao Paulo villages of Passa Quatro and Sao Jose Dos Barreiros.

Port of Santos Closed.

The loyalist navy halted the steamer Mariam en route to Santos loaded with grain. The government has ordered that port closed in an attempt to starve out the rebels.

There was still no sign of a big push by the federal government against the rebels, who began their movement early this month with a demand for an immediate return to constitutional government. Provisional President Vargas gained the presidential power in a revolution two years ago and promised constitutionalism by 1933.

Peru Quells New Uprising.

LIMA, Peru, July 18.—(AP)—The government announced tonight a revolutionary movement occurred at Huaraz, capital of the department of Ancachas, south of Trujillo, yesterday and was definitely smashed within a few hours. Late last night loyal troops recaptured the city from rebels and the revolutionaries fled, the announcement said.

Further dispatches tonight said the rebels had captured several officials when they fled.

President Luis M. Sanchez Cerro today convened a special congress of 150 leaders in various industries and asked them to unite all the country's "good elements" to "fight and destroy those who are able to carry on revolts."

Three Nations Recognize Chile.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 18.—Cuba, Uruguay, and Bolivia have recognized the new Chilean government headed by Provisional President Carlos G. Davila, former ambassador to the United States, it was announced today.

The new government invited recognition last week by notifying all foreign diplomats here of its readiness to respect all international obligations and its ability to enforce law and order.

BRITISH PROPOSE TO SLAP TAX ON FOREIGN FOOD

Farm and Industry Reach Agreement.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

QUEBEC, Que., July 18.—Agreements have been reached between representatives of the British National Farmers' union, headed by Capt. W. S. Morrison, member of parliament, and the British industrial group, headed by Lord Weir. If the agreements are accepted by the imperial conference at Ottawa they may exert a far-reaching effect on American trade.

The trouble in arriving at any effective imperial trade preference has been the necessity of taxing food imported into Great Britain from foreign countries in order to give preference to empire produce.

American Meats Hit.

Industrialists, who are interested in reducing the living costs for the workers, have been opposed to food taxes, while the farmers are pressing for agricultural protection. The two groups have now agreed to tax foreign food as an experiment for at least three years. Empire food will be admitted free.

This would affect dairy produce, bacon and pork from Denmark, cheese from Holland, and meats from America and Argentina.

The fly in the ointment is the trades union delegation of the Trades Union congress, which is expected to object to any tax on food imports. The situation may develop into a trial of strength between British labor on one side and the employers and farmers on the other.

The industrialists have been won over by the pledge of the farmers to support a demand for reciprocal favors on British manufactured goods in the dominions.

Fire Panic Averted.

The British, South African, Indian, North Irish, and southern Rhodesian delegations were afforded considerable excitement in their last 24 hours aboard the H. M. S. Empress of Britain.

Last night during a concert an electric light fused, causing a small fire behind the stage. There was no panic and the fire was quickly extinguished. Then the ship was delayed by fog so that instead of arriving at Quebec about 11 a. m. she was compelled to anchor in the St. Lawrence, missing the midday tide. Shortly before 9 a. m. the vessel collided with a small British freighter, Briarwood. Most of the passfreighter, Briarwood. Neither ship was badly damaged.

On landing Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council of the British cabinet and president of the British delegation, was greeted by C. H. Cahan, Canadian secretary of state, and Sir William Clark, high commissioner of the United Kingdom of Canada.

Baldwin expressed high hopes of the success of the conference, not only in the forging of closer trade bonds within the commonwealth, but also in assisting in the economic rehabilitation of the world.

The delegates left Quebec at 9 p. m. for Ottawa in two special trains.

STRUGGLE TO WIN ACCORD ON ARMS; PARLEY TO CLOSE

Gibson Pushes Hoover's Plan at Geneva.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, July 18.—Premier Edouard Herriot of France came from Paris today to give his personal touch to the burial that is being prepared for the international disarmament conference this week. He heard the now fairly desperate pleas of the American delegation that the Hoover disarmament plan ought to be given a better place in the declaration of adjournment.

There is reason to believe tonight that Herriot, anxious to make this conference appear not too great a failure, sympathized. If so, there will appear in the declaration, which commends the conference to a better life later on, a statement that the Hoover plan to reduce military effectives is to be one of the canons of that new existence. Armed forces would be limited to the number necessary "for the maintenance of internal order plus some suitable contingent for defense" under the Hoover proposals.

The American delegation tonight appeared convinced Herriot has heeded their plea and that they have won a great victory. If he has actually agreed to mention the formula on effectives the Americans will have salvaged nearly all of the wreckage of the Hoover plan. The declaration of adjournment is not intended to represent a real achievement so much as to point the way to future success, if and when the conference reconvenes.

The document first reiterates its ambitions, recites the "conclusions" of the conference's "first phase" and indicates how the "second phase" is to be prepared for the next session probably in January of next year, and asks for a four months' extension of the armaments truce which expires in November.

What Resolution Says.

Under the heading of conclusions there are four important gaps, which the delegates of the big powers in their last minute conversations are trying to fill in. They are aerial bombardment, heavy mobile guns, budgetry reduction and President Hoover's proposal to reduce military effectives.

The first section of the resolution reads in part:

"Deeply persuaded that the hour has come for all nations to adopt wide and substantial disarmament measures to consolidate the peace of the world, hasten economic revival, and lighten financial burdens now weighing upon all peoples:

"Anxious to avoid an armaments race that is both ruinous to peoples and menacing to their national defense;

"Saluting cordially the initiative of President Hoover in formulating concrete propositions tending toward a substantial reduction in armaments by a ban on certain methods of warfare, the suppression of certain material, and the importance of variable reductions reaching one-third for certain arms;

O. K. Substantial Reductions.

"Decided now and unanimously inspired by the general principles underlying the declaration by President Hoover:

"1. That there shall be effected a substantial reduction of world armaments which should be applied together in a general treaty to land, sea, and air armaments.

"2. That the essential attainment is to reduce the means of aggression."

The naval powers will be asked to get together on the Hoover naval proposals during the "recess."

SOUTH PARK COP IS SEIZED AFTER SUICIDE THREAT

When Mrs. Lillian Behnke returned to her home at 4627 South Harding avenue last night she found a note on the table, left by her husband, Leo Behnke, 47 years old, a south park policeman. The note, police said, indicated Behnke meant to kill himself.

Mrs. Behnke hurried to her husband's bedroom. The door was locked. She notified Brighton Park police and Detectives William Friel and Ludwig Morley responded. They smashed in the locked door and seized Behnke just as he awakened from what police said was a drunken slumber. Beneath his pillow were found two loaded revolvers.

Mrs. Behnke told Lieut. Paul Riccio that her husband has had illusions that she thinks more of her three children by a previous marriage than she does of him. She charged that he had beaten her recently. Behnke was held.

DRUGSTORE IS ROBBED.

Three armed men yesterday entered a Walgreen drugstore at 5600 West Madison street and forced Jerry Cherry, assistant manager, to hand over $240.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

CONGRESS ADJOURNS.

When congress was about to begin its session apprehensive people prepared themselves to survive if possible. The hard times would get harder and the question was whether the country could weather what its congressional politicians would do to it. The experience has justified the liveliest fears and, although congress has now done the only good in its power in adjourning, the returns are not in. The best is that the country now knows the worst, but it does not know yet how it can take it.

The full effect of the money bills passed will not be felt until next year when the increased taxes will hit diminishing resources. If there is a miracle in the destiny of the United States, now is the time it should give a portent. Not since reconstruction days has a congress so made necessary the intervention of magic.

The best that can be said of the work of the adjourned legislators is that it is not believable. Forewarned as the nation was, it could not be prepared for the experience which now cannot be understood. The government seemed to be bent on self-destruction. The picture would not have been changed if an invading army had pitched its tents in Washington and if its major generals had set up their council on Capitol hill to fix the levies on the conquered with the determination to impoverish them.

The enemies of representative government have never had more encouragement given them in the United States. They have seen the members of congress themselves act for the destruction of the scheme in which they operate. The proposals and acts of congress were calculated to make government under a representative assembly impossible and to throw the country into a dictatorship, of the soviets if it goes to the left, of the Fascists if it goes to the right. Congress was inviting in the red shirts or the black.

A government which has suffocated the enterprise of the people by bureaucratic intervention in their affairs, when called upon by national emergency to release that control, increased it. A government whose taxes have taken the profit from private enterprise and discouraged the undertaking of new enterprises, when called upon to reduce its exactions, raised them. When asked to consent to a reduction in its restrictive functions it added to them. When required by national emergency to permit the people to use their resources for the recovery of their normal way of living and impair these resources as little as possible it multiplied the levies upon them.

Mr. Garner's idea of building postoffices upon the ruins of villages glinted with all the light of unreason which prevailed while congress sat. The economic theory of congress was that vanishing revenue should be compensated by increased expenditures, that the prostration of useful and necessary private activities should be relieved by the costs of useless public works and that the profits of industry should be confiscated by the waste of government.

Will it be believed, for instance, that the American government based a revenue expectation upon the illegal use of beer materials and taxed them? What can be expected of a legislative assembly which works with addled minds and morals?

How far the work of congress has set back the recovery of the country cannot be estimated now. The people must struggle to survive their government. It has not imposed an easy task.

ANOTHER STAMP TAX.

A Wisconsin taxpayers' alliance modeled on the Indiana plan, which resulted in great savings to the people of that state, has been formed to demand a reduction of state taxes. Milwaukee county, startled at learning its needs for the coming year will be greater than can be raised by taxation, turns to a committee of citizens for help to find means of adjusting its budget. Such reports come from every direction. The rumble of the taxpayers distinctly is taking form.

Now comes Sheboygan, Wis., a placid city once famous for the superior quality of the beer brewed there, and proclaims the organization of a club to which the stamp tax effective this month is the last straw. [One who knew the agreeable society of Sheboygan in the pleasant days before prohibition could carry the analogy of the camel further, but that would be a diversion too diverting.]

The club was formed to spread the protest against the 50 per cent increase in postal rates. Wherever the mail of its members goes, the envelopes carry, embossed in a bright green, the quotation, "3 cent postage—Commemorating the 50 per cent increase in first class postal rates."

Rudolf Herrmann is club president. Its members, mostly substantial Germans, kept their patience at a constantly growing real estate tax. They were serene at a 100 per cent increase in the gasoline tax of the state. They paid the additional grab at the gasoline pump by the federal government. They paid, if they could, a state relief tax that stretched back into last year's income and exacted a payment of more than double what they had expected to pay. They paid to the best of their ability all of the multiplicity of taxes old and new that go to make office holding the first industry of this land.

But they will not pay 3 cents postage for a letter without complaining about it. The Sheboygan Stamp club has adopted a theme song, a copy of which is inclosed in all the correspondence of its members. The song expresses a sentiment likely to become popular before November. The contribution of the Sheboygan Stamp club to the politics of the land follows:

If indignant you should wax
At the increase in this tax,
Just remember
Next November
And apply the ax.

Evidence is gathering steadily that the oppression of the taxpayers has become unbearable.

SAMMONS AND THE LAW.

The turning loose upon the public of an individual considered by the police and the Chicago crime commission a dangerous criminal is an event the community cannot fail to notice with indignation and alarm. It is the result of proceedings in the court of another county. The public does not know what are the legal reasons which impressed this court and in its opinion compelled the release. The public knows that an individual who ought not to be at large has been set at large under forms of law, and it will want to know why the laws permit it and demand correction.

The first breach in the defense of the community against Sammons was when the deliberate judgment of a jury that he should hang for murder was set aside by Gov. Yates, in the exercise of what is called executive clemency. The next breach was when the life sentence imposed by Yates was commuted by Len Small to a term of fifty years. This commutation was not what it seemed to be. Its real effect was to permit the parole board to act for the release of Sammons under parole, which soon occurred.

Why did the Len Small parole board think Sammons ought to be set at large? That is one of the interesting questions raised in this history.

Sammons three years after his parole was given a full discharge, but during the drive on "public enemies" the attorney general held that the parole act did not apply to commutations and, this view being upheld by Circuit Judge McGoorty and affirmed by the Supreme court, Sammons was returned to the penitentiary. Nevertheless, by the judgment of another Circuit judge, Edward D. Shurtleff of McHenry county, Sammons now goes free again.

The ability of a man of Sammons' kind to move two governors of the state to the exercise of executive clemency, and one parole board to the granting first of his release on parole and later his complete discharge, is a most interesting phenomenon. The proceedings in McHenry county is another.

The public knows nothing of the legal formalities under which Sammons is set free. It knows that its protection from Sammons and from men of his kind has been broken through repeatedly in this case. And it will recognize in this sinister record the hand of corrupt politics and its partner, professional crime. If defective laws have contributed to it they can be amended, but the evil of unfaithful performance of duty, as in the case of the interference with justice in the guise of executive clemency, is more difficult to reach. That means conscience and intelligence in the selection of the men who administer the laws we have and the defeat of unfaithful public servants.

ORDERLY LIQUIDATION OF A GOOD JOB.

President Huff of the national coöperatives announces that the funding of the $16,000,000 indebtedness of the Farmers' National Grain corporation to the federal farm board has been agreed upon by the corporation and the board. This, it is explained, provides for its orderly liquidation over a period of ten years. Also it implies the continued existence of these famous agencies of the public weal—a comfortable stay of ten years at the public crib.

SPEED TRAPS.

It is the occasional incident which uncovers the petty brigandage practiced on motorists by village police and porch sitting justices of the peace. The incident is when a citizen is trapped but declines, in spite of the inconvenience a defense costs him, to pay without a fight. Many will submit where one will resist. Extortion spots break out in Cook county every spring and apparently soon get on a paying basis.

There is no excuse for the continuance of these offenses. In Cook county they are subject to action by the state's attorney. His office can stop the disreputable minor law officers who misuse their local authority to shake down the people who happen along their roads and streets. Some of the constables and justices are now laying in their winter supply of coal by operations on the highway. Prosecution by the state's attorney would remove the crooked speed traps.

Editorial of the Day

MAINE AND THE LOBSTER.

[New York Herald-Tribune.]

While gourmets and legislators of the department council of the Cote d'Or in France are gravely concerning themselves for the state of the Burgundian snail crop, which is running perilously thin, the Yankee citizenry of the state of Maine is anxiously awaiting the passage of additional statutes for the conservation of that most famous of down east fare, the Maine lobster. What the racy shad is to the Delaware and the roe rich sturgeon to the Caspian the best lobsters in the world are to the icy waters fished by 12,000 hardy lobstermen of the Pine Tree state; but for the last forty years there has been a shocking shrinkage in the annual catch, and where in 1890 three pounds of lobster were taken only one was trapped last year. Now Maine seeks additional state laws and the passing of a federal legislative measure prohibiting the importation of short length lobsters from Canada.

The specific terms of the protective legislation needed may safely be left to Maine authorities, but the general movement is of interest throughout the country wherever good eating is practiced. Maine produces three-fifths of the lobster catch of all the North Atlantic states, and its crustaceans are rated by table amateurs as second to none in all the waters of the world. If the shore dinner tradition of New England is to be preserved as a contribution of major importance to our civilization every baby lobster from Kittery Point to Passamaquoddy bay should know that he may grow to adequate maturity before even so much as hearing about boiling or broiling, fish forks, salad dressing, or melted butter sauce.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

A GERANIUM SPEAKS.

Jess Bottomly from brown-hilled Bentlyville
Communes with growing things. She talked to me:
"My pots are filled. Today I have
Transplanted wax-begonia, Boston fern:
For that bay window in the big south room.
I've saved the tube rose and the winter pink,
For days I cook the pot of sauerkraut—
Have planted grapefruit seeds in chipped-edge crocks,
And can't be bothered with plain garden folks
Like red geraniums."
I dropped a petal, then,
I always knew Jess weakened when they fell.
"If you insist . . . there's a tomato can
Out in the woodshed on the 'extra' shelf;
Then . . . have it your way . . . plants are talkin' folks."

And then she brought the rusty, paint-stained can,
Erased the gaudy label at the pump,
And scooped a shining shovel full of earth
From underneath the purple lilac tree.
She cut me from my mother's earth-bound breast:
A slip, she said I was . . . a budded slip—
Would die, perhaps, but she'd risk me, this time.
And so . . . the can and I were tightly bound,
But while the dampness of my daily drink
Sent it most surely to a rusty grave,
I still observe.
And last week Jessie wrote
To the postmaster over at The Falls:
"Dear Hiram—Are you positive no mail
Has come for me in this last span of months?
And are there other Bottomlys that might
Have made mistake and claimed it for their own?
And 'J' looks like so many capitals."

Then, when she'd finished writing, turned to me—
As though I was her favorite in the bay:
Said . . . "Folks ain't flowers. They're burdock, like as not,
And minds are like locked drawers, my time o' life."
She looked for letters, so the cactus said,
Since he put out his first sand-colored thorn,
But none had come. The proud, tubbed fern replied:
"When I was but a tender shoot, the storm
Blew out the window in the sitting room,
Before we had this shelved place in the sun.
The India lily then was frozen to the root!
Miss Jess was beautiful. Had hair like gold,
And eyes that watered when she pinched a leaf
That, dying, sapped the strength of other plants."

A passing stranger in the storm one night
Pulled on the china door knob bell so hard
That, frightened as she was, Jess let him in . . .
And let him stay to build these sunny shelves.
He'd been a gardener in the far-off west,
Where turnips and tomatoes grow like grass,
And roses hang on every fence like weeds.
Jess cooked for him. She made thick lemon pies—
And opened currant and gooseberry jam,
But little did he eat, looking at her.
"Miss Bottomly," he said, in tone-deep voice,
"Tomorrow has been long in coming . . . yes . . .
I've got to leave." It was a blow, and she Looked long at him, as April violets do
When stepped on as they bloom, in early spring.

And the next morning, walking toward the gate,
He looked at her as we turned to the sun—
Said something like "I'll write. You'll hear from me."
But none of us were sure that he said that.
Now . . . since that day, Miss Jess has seemed like one
Who lives below the soil. We take his place;
And last year when the red begonia died
One might have thought it was the stranger man,
It was his favorite we'd heard him say.

And when one noon Miss Bottomly had come
To read her paper in the highest light,
We heard her say "beloved!" and close her eyes:
I leaned a little further from the sill,
And read these lines where her white hand had dropped:

Names new-found orchid for Miss Bottomly
Before he dies in fatal greenhouse blast.

She talks to me the same as ever, though,
And said today, "Your soil is pretty rich,
I guess you'll stand the gold-rimmed jardiniere."

WEEK-END TRIPS ought to make us less afraid of the old demon depression. Of course, if we are going to emit three or four horrible groans every time we pay for gas or keep our minds on politics by asking the hot dog man who he thinks is going to be elected President next fall, we won't be very much soothed and comforted when we get back home. Besides, we have to buy gas anyhow to make the old bus go, and there's no use groaning about it, and the hot dog man doesn't know who's going to be elected President next fall. If he knew he wouldn't have to sell hot dogs. But if we look at the great trees growing along the roadside, and if we stop the car once in a while in a shady dell and watch a busy little brook and look at the grass and the growing grain in the fields, the blue sky and the fleecy clouds, then after a while we'll begin to realize that there are a lot of things that the depression can't touch one way or the other. Ask the flowers and the brook and the trees and the green grass and the blue sky about it. And in their own way they'll answer: "The depression? What depression? Goodness! We near heard of it."

We Can Change It if He Isn't.

"What street's this, mister?" said the gawky stranger.

"Roosevelt road."

"What the heck are yur anamin streets for him before he's even elected?"

NOW THAT CONGRESS has adjourned, how are we going to enjoy ourselves? Wondering what the heck congress would do next, if anything, was good, clean sport, and, while it was pretty expensive fun, there was a good kick to it. Nothing now but crossword puzzles and matching pennies. R. H. L.

THE CHANGING FEMALE.

SEVERAL reports are agreed that the college boy and girl of the present day are better physical specimens than their predecessors were. A report to this effect, based on careful and extensive physical measurements of boys, comes from the University of Minnesota. This space has been used to comment on similar reports based on measurements made on girls in California. If there have been reports of this kind made on students in southern institutions I have not seen them, but that does not mean that such studies have not been recorded.

Several reasons for the improvement in the racial stock are offered. One is that people are better fed than they have ever been before. It has even been claimed that when the short, stocky Jap is well fed from childhood he develops into an adult larger in stature than the average of his race. Another claim is that improvement is a result of greater use of athletics and a change in physical ideals.

I recently had an opportunity to observe the students in a large eastern school for girls. The number of pupils in this institution is around two thousand. The school enjoys a reputation for sound and progressive scholarship. The mental training given is not a matter of comment here. This recital deals with the physical development of the members of the student body and the machinery for that.

There is a physical examination on entrance and health service during the school years. Participation in some form of physical competitive sport is a part of the curriculum. A girl may elect the sport she wants to engage in, but she must take at least a minimum amount of work at one, and opportunities are given for engaging voluntarily in others. If the college has any records for prizes won by specialized groups in anything I do not know of it, but I am certain that no school could far excel them in mass average excellence in any of the standard sports.

But probably of equal import is the general spirit of everyday performance of the regular activities of life. The girls walk upright, with head and shoulders held high, and back straight. They walk as though they were on the way and intended to get there. It is the fashion this year to wear socks rather than stockings. Their legs show muscles. It is the custom to wear broad shoes with low, broad heels. They ride bicycles a great deal and they show the results in the way they walk and stand. That standing pose strongly suggests that they may have had a major course in carrying a bucket of water on the head. One further suspects this when he sees the good neck muscles and the straight, well held backs and shoulders.

DANGEROUS THROAT.

Dr. M. H. W. writes: You are wrong in saying the dangerous area in the larynx is the vocal cords. It is the subglottic space just below the cords, being in the region of the cricoid cartilage and just below it. The reason it is dangerous is because it is composed of loose tissue which can swell readily. It is especially dangerous in children under two years of age.

NERVOUS YOUTH.

An appreciative reader writes: I have a young friend who is extremely nervous. He is still in his early twenties, but he is fast becoming a nervous wreck. This nervousness is especially bad when he loses control of his temper.

REPLY.

What is the cause of this nervousness? Has he a goiter? What is his metabolism rate? If he is free from physical disorder his nervousness probably is due to lack of training or faulty training. If that is the trouble the remedy lies in training.

SKIPPING HEART.

E. C. writes: 1. If a person's heart beats four or five, then skips a beat, then beats eight or ten times and again skips a beat, is it a sign of heart trouble? Is it a serious kind? If so, what is it called?

REPLY.

Intermittent heartbeat, irregular heart, palpitation, nervous heart are some of the names for this condition. In most cases it is not serious. In some it is. Have a physician examine your heart and see what causes this symptom, whether or not it is serious, whether you need to do anything, and, if so, what.

WHITE TONGUE.

S. R. writes: What is the cause of a constant white coating on one's tongue, and also its remedy?

REPLY.

Among the causes are constipation, belching, sleeping with the mouth open, snoring. Treatment consists in overcoming the cause.

Chewing gum is of some service. The tongue can be scraped, using some dull edge for the purpose.

ARTHRITIS.

J. L. W. writes: I have arthritis in my finger joints, which are beginning to get out of shape. I am 56 years old, in good health, and quite active.

REPLY.

This form of arthritis is very frequently found in persons of your age and beyond. Women often have it. It is very slowly progressive and, beyond gnarling the hands, does not do a great deal of harm. Probably you will not succeed in finding a cure.

POTATO STARCH.

F. A. writes: 1. Is starch from potatoes good to wash the hair with or not? 2. Is rain water good?

REPLY.

1. I know of no reason why it should be. 2. Yes.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 19, 1916.

LONDON.—In a storm of gas shells the Germans began a fierce counter attack against Gen. Haig's line today. The battle is still in progress, according to an official statement issued at midnight. The steady advance of the British troops threatens the Albert plateau. So serious has this menace become that the kaiser's forces, drawn up before the third line of defense, are assailing the enemy line vigorously in an effort to force loose the British hold. Pozieres is now only a dent in the British line. The capture of a 1,500 yard front north of Bazentin yesterday cut it off on the east. The capture of 1,000 yards of trenches north of Oilliers last night cut it off on the west. The city lies in ruins. Into its battered walls the British guns are pouring shell from both sides, preparing the way for the thrust that will carry the stronghold.

PETROGRAD.—A Russian victory over Teutonic forces in southern Volhynia has resulted in their being driven across the Lipa river and beyond that stream, says a war office statement. The Germans have retreated nearly ten miles before the swift advance of Gen. Kaledin's left wing, which is driving on Kovel, the big rail center.

ROME.—The Italians are making further advances against the Austrians despite vigorous opposition, the war office announced. Artillery engagements occurred in the region of Stelvio and the Tonale.

CHICAGO.—Six deaths which followed yesterday in the wake of a maniacal outburst of killing on the part of a "harmless" Negro fanatic may lead to a radical change in Chicago's method of dealing with its morons and half-wits. On investigating the circumstances of the amazing affray that held a west side neighborhood terror stricken for four hours Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court demanded at once that the police round up the paranoiacs in the city, bring them before the county court, and have them sent to institutions—locked up. The police knew of Henry McIntyre, the Negro who stepped at daybreak with a rifle from his home at 320 North Irving avenue, killed four people, and received his death wound by the side of his wife's lifeless body. The police knew him as "queer." In addition to the six dead three policemen and two women neighbors were wounded by the maniac and his wife before they were killed by rifle fire and dynamite.

CHICAGO.—It is now a month since the Illinois militiamen, together with the militia of the other states, answered President Wilson's call for the National Guard to support the government's Mexican policy. Approximately 160,000 men responded. Of these, 100,000 have been sent to the border and 60,000 are being kept in state mobilization camps. It is estimated that volunteer organizations since formed will total 20,000 men. In addition to these forces, 14,300 men belonging to various state militia organizations, were not called out, bring the total available volunteer army close to the 200,000 mark. Illinois has 11,000 men on the border, being second only to New York, with a quota of 16,000 men. Pennsylvania is third on the list with 9,000 men in actual service, and Massachusetts fourth with 7,150.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

What is the nature and significance of fossils?

[This question will be repeated and answered in this space tomorrow.]

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION.

What items of geological history do we learn from the study of Chicago quarries?

REPLY.

All Chicago quarries are in limestone, the "bed rock" which everywhere underlies the region. It is stratified, each layer originally soft lime mud, now consolidated. Fossils of marine animals are common in it, showing that when the mud was deposited this region was covered with sea water. Coral reefs similar to existing reefs are recognizable in several quarries. Since these now grow only at relative slight depths this mid-continental sea probably was a shallow embayment somewhat like Hudson bay, but its water was considerably warmer. Fossils of the same extinct species are known in the limestone from the lip of Niagara falls and at many other places in the great lakes region and adjacent Canada (even in Greenland). Geologists consider this good evidence that these limestones are of the same age and that the ancient shallow marine embayment extended over the entire area where these outcrops occur.

DERIVATIVE CITIZENSHIP.

Gladstone, Mich., July 13.—[Friend of the People.]—My neighbor has been in the United States for over forty years. Her husband became a citizen of the United States about the year 1918. About a year ago her husband died. 1. Is this party a citizen of the United States through her husband's naturalization? 2. Is there any way by which she can travel to Canada and return without being detained by the immigration officials? H. W. C.

1. If the facts are correctly stated, the person referred to is a citizen of the United States. She may apply to this service for a certificate of derivative citizenship, if she desires.

2. It is believed that she will have no difficulty in reentering the United States if she exhibits her marriage certificate and her husband's certificate of naturalization to the immigration officials. This service has no information as to the Canadian immigration regulations.

STOCKHOLDER'S LIABILITY.

Chicago, July 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. If A buys five shares in a state bank and pays $350 per share and later the bank fails, is he obliged to pay $100 per share or $500 to the receiver of the bank? 2. If A sells the five shares of stock to B and later the bank fails, is A still obliged to pay $100 per share for each share he sold to B? 3. If A inherits property worth $5,000 or $5,000 in cash from his parents, is he obliged to pay inheritance tax? How much? R. W. F.

1. Yes, if the bank assets are insufficient.
2. He is obliged to pay his pro rata share of debts that were incurred while he was a stockholder.
3. No, this amount would be within the exemption under the Illinois inheritance tax.

A SOLDIER'S ANNIVERSARY.

Joliet, Ill., July 16.—It is 4 a. m., July 18, 1918, the start of the allies' great counter offensive, and the turning point of the world war. At that moment the defensive warfare of the allies gave way to a continued offensive, which had no parallel, and never halted until the final capitulation, Nov. 11.

At 7 o'clock the night of the 17th we were camped in a heavy pine woods, about twenty miles from the front line. The division was tired from a long tour of front line duty at Cantigny and most of us looked forward to a rest, with visions of a few days' leave to Paris. Suddenly, however, officer's call was sounded and we immediately repaired to the colonel's headquarters, expecting a sarcastic lecture on the terrible crime of men on the march wearing their bayonets on their belts, contrary to military regulations. The colonel, however, was unusually brief, "Gentlemen, we go over the top at Cutry at 4 a. m. tomorrow. Your companies will form immediately for the march. Additional orders will be issued later. You are dismissed!"

Within an hour with thousands of other American soldiers we were on the march. During the night a light drizzle set in and in the pitch darkness that followed many became lost from their outfits. But somehow or other we stumbled forward all night long and 3:30 found us in the front line trenches near Cutry. A few minutes before 4, as I recall, a heavy artillery barrage commenced, then came the tanks to break the barbed wire, and at 4 we went over the top.

Fighting in heavy wheat that came up almost to the waist, with but little food and no sleep, the next four days are good deal of a nightmare. Losses were heavy, friends and buddies of many a long march. All the majors of the regiment either killed or badly wounded, and then a runner with the news that both the colonel and lieutenant colonel were killed and that a young captain, twenty-six years old, was the commanding officer of the regiment, as its senior officer. It became necessary to combine squads, platoons, companies, and battalions. Surviving officers and noncoms had to be redistributed, a complete reorganization effected on the battlefield. But orders were to advance, and advance we did.

Our battalion had two hundred and fifty survivors of an original twelve hundred; the regimental and divisional losses were proportionately almost as heavy. But the First division, together with the 2d, 3d, 4th, 26th, and 28th, had, over a wide front, taken ten miles of enemy territory and changed the story of the war.

Over a hundred thousand American soldiers took part and many thousands were left on the battlefield. Without them there would be no "German reparations, and post-war problems would be of an entirely different character. In the light of present day propaganda for cancellation would not a few moments' thought to the incidents of fourteen years ago be beneficial? G. L. C.

THE WORSE HOLE.

Chicago, July 15.—Teachers and public employés, take notice. I have been a taxpayer of Chicago for 33 years—sometimes large and other times small properties. At present I own a bungalow. Am a union plumber out of employment for more than three years. Stocks crashed, real estate bonds defaulted, bank closed, which left me broke. My 1929-'30 taxes are not paid. I have made an offer to work for the city until my taxes are paid. With that money they can pay the teachers or employés. So far my offer has been refused. It is the only means I have left to pay my taxes. Now let me hear from you.

A. C. MILLER.

TRAINING CAMPS FOR THE UNEMPLOYED.

Chicago, June 22.—It seems to me that congress should give immediate consideration to legislation to permit unemployed American men to enlist in the reserve corps of the army or navy for six, nine or twelve months for a suitable course of training, the law to provide that any member may be discharged upon satisfactory evidence that he has secured a position. An appropriation of $500,000,000 should go a long way in opening up and repairing the required number of cantonments now lying idle, or practically idle, providing uniforms, food, some entertainment, and a nominal salary of $15 or $20 per month per man. With the exception of a limited number of experienced army and navy officers, the supervisory staff could be built up from among the enlistel personnel and their salaries kept at nominal figures.

Among the principal and definite benefits are the following:

Afford opportunity for approximately one-half million men to get by until the wheels of industry start again.

The training would keep these men healthy, physically and mentally.

It would greatly diminish the number of unemployed who must be fed next winter with money from somewhere, and from present indications most of it will have to come from the federal treasury.

Part of their wages should be deducted to assist in supporting dependents.

Several lines of industry would benefit in supplying clothing, food, lumber and various other materials.

This would in some measure serve as a substitute for the bonus.

It would give military training to thousands of unemployed men who were too young for service in 1917 and 1918.

STOCKHOLDERS' LIABILITY.

Evanston, Ill., July 6.—Lately much discussion has appeared in the press, editorially and otherwise, on the subject of safeguarding the funds of depositors in banks. On this subject I am prompted to suggest a plan which I have not heretofore seen mentioned.

Briefly the plan is this: That legislation shall compel the holder or purchaser of bank stock to immediately deposit [in the case of a national bank, with the controller of the currency; and in the case of a state bank, with the state auditor] United States government bonds to the amount of the stockholder's full legal liability. Upon the closing of a bank the federal or state officer shall immediately sell the bonds and apply the proceeds to the payment of the closed bank's deposit liability. O. A. WACHS.

THE TWAIN HAVE MET.

Chicago, July 10.—The sole function of government is to exercise sovereignty. The sole function of capital is to do business. GEORGE R. WALKER.

REFERRED TO MR. HENNING.

Chicago, July 7.—There is a current rumor going about that Mr. Roosevelt will cancel the war debts if the league of nations will purchase Canada from Great Britain and turn it over to the United States in return for the cancellation.

Personally I am against any cancellation, but on these terms I am for it. Get us the lowdown on this most interesting rumor. G. M. HAMMOND.

VACATIONS RESENTED.

Chicago, July 6.—This is a protest against the granting of vacations with pay to employés of the Emergency Relief fund. That money was contributed for relief of the unemployed, and those responsible for its diversion to provide holidays for a well paid class are guilty of a base betrayal of their trust.

THE LATEST VICTIM

[Irish Weekly Independent, Dublin.]

BONUS MARCHERS ACT TO MOBILIZE ALL UNEMPLOYED

Thousands of Veterans Leaving Washington.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—With thousands of members of the bonus expeditionary force leaving the city on money loaned them by the government a plan to swell the rapidly diminishing ranks of the "army" by broadening its membership to include all the unemployed in the country was in the making today.

The move was announced late this afternoon by National Commander Walter W. Waters, following a conference with Representative F. H. La Guardia [Rad. Rep., N. Y.]. Mr. La Guardia declined to discuss his meeting with the bonus leader beyond verifying the fact that it had taken place and admitting that he knew of Waters' announced intention to organize the unemployed.

Leads War on Sales Tax.

Representative La Guardia is recognized as the radical leader of the radical bloc in the house of representatives. It was he who led the radical revolt which knocked the sales tax from the new revenue bill and who greeted the high income tax, surtax, and estate rates which were put into the bill to fill part of the gap by saying that they "surpassed my fondest dreams."

Waters' action was an obvious attempt to offset the heavy exodus of bonus marchers which was accelerated by the adjournment of congress on Saturday. Discouraged by their failure to force their demands for immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates on congress and by the prospect of scanty food and little comfort if they remain here, thousands of the veterans applied at the veterans' bureau today for loans under the $100,000 transportation apropriation authorized about a fornight ago by congress.

Waits for Tickets.

Before the doors of the bureau were opened at 9 o'clock more than a thousand of the bonus marchers had formed a line to apply for the loans which congress authorized as a means of evacuating the city of the army.

By noon the total number of veterans who have received railroad tickets thus far had been swelled to 2,215, and there were more than 2,500 applications on file with the bureau. In addition, 345 have received funds with which to travel home by automobile. Officials of the veterans' administration predicted that the number would be doubled if the present rate of applications continues throughout the day.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, has reported to President Hoover that there are approximately 7,500 veterans now in the city. Leaders of the bonus force contend, on the other hand, that the army numbers more than 20,000, and that the number leaving the city is more than offset by the new arrivals.

Three Veterans Fined.

Three members of the bonus army were fined in Police court today on charges growing out of the disorders at the White House on Saturday. They were Nathan Kalb, Patrick Hannigan, and Urban Ledoux, all members of the radical "left wing" of the bonus army. During their trial police arrested two other radical veterans outside the courtroom for attempting to incite a riot in front of the building. They were listed at headquarters as Albert Hale of Detroit and John Fabroshoski of Pittsburgh, and are being held for investigation.

Meanwhile it was learned that leaders of the bonus army have asked prohibition agents to raid several sources from which liquor has been flowing into the bonus camps. Eleven members of the army have been arrested for drunkenness.

According to an announcement made at bonus headquarters today, Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler, retired formerly stormy petrel of the Marine corps, is to address the veterans at Camp Marks in Anacostia tomorrow night.

FEDERATION OF LABOR NONPARTISAN; ALSO TWICE DISAPPOINTED

Atlantic City, N. J., July 18.—[Special.]—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor today announced it would continue to adhere to a nonpartisan political policy during the presidential campaign, but voiced its deep disappointment with the platforms adopted by both Republican and Democratic parties at Chicago.

While the Republican platform had more planks favoring organized labor's proposals than the Democratic platform, the executive council felt that neither party had dealt with the labor program "as fully, completely and definitely as had been expected."

Those among the Democrats who felt that their wet plank would alone be sufficient to swing the executive council into a declaration favoring them were doomed to disappointment.

DIVORCES GAIN ON MARRIAGES IN U. S. IN 1931

Both, However, Showing a Decline.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—With both affected by the depression, the 1931 national battle between Dan Cupid and the divorce court ended with the percentage score just a trifle in favor of the latter, according to statistics made public today by the census bureau. In totals of course cupid still is winner by almost a million.

There was a slump in both the number of marital knots tied and the number of divorces during the year, the bureau reported, but the decline in the number of marriages was 6.1 per cent and the drop in divorces only 4.1 per cent. On a percentage basis, therefore, Dan Cupid was 2 per cent behind his rival for the year.

Nevertheless, the number of weddings remained far in excess of the number of divorces. There were, according to the bureau, 1,060,095 marriages, or 8.5 for every 1,000 persons in the country. Divorces numbered 183,695, or 1.499 per 1,000 of population. In the United States as a whole there were 5.8 marriages for every divorce during 1931, as compared with 5.9 in the preceding year.

Marriages in Illinois numbered 71,636 during the year for a decrease of 5.7 per cent from the 1930 total. Divorces in the state numbered 13,893, decreasing 10 per cent from the preceding year.

HELD IN CAR THEFT CASE.

George Atkinson, 27 years old, 13117 South State street, was held to the grand jury yesterday by Judge John Sbarbaro on a charge of receiving stolen property. Atkinson was arrested when he claimed a stolen car, which police were watching, in a garage at 4171 Lake Park avenue.

WHATAMAN TOO EXPENSIVE; MA SEEKS DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Cal., July 18.—[Special.]—Mrs. Minnie [Ma] Kennedy Hudson, mother of Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton, who has been trying to connect Guy "Whataman" Hudson with a job of steady work, gave up today. She signed a divorce complaint against Whataman in the office of her attorney.

"I'll have something to remember him by," said Ma. "It's a sheaf of promissory notes for $4,300, signed by Mr. Hudson."

"I found out that a used Hudson wasn't much good," Ma continued. "The upkeep is too great. It was 'Gimme, gimme, gimme' all the time from the start."

"What grounds are you charging?" Ma was asked.

"Well, said Ma, "I think I can claim mental cruelty, profanity, repeated intoxication, threats, and that 'gimme' complex."

"He was just a vagabond lover," said Ma.

She explained that her troubles with Whataman grew in reverse proportion to the size of her bank roll—"Old sock," she called it.

"When the old sock began to unravel, then Whataman began to travel," she put it.

She said that some of the notes she exchanged for her bank roll were given her in return for cash she advanced Whataman to finance their first honeymoon, after a midnight marriage at the side of a lake at Longview, Wash., on June 23, 1931. Some of the subsequent expenses were undertaken when Hudson was dubbed a bigamist by another woman, and traveled about California and Nevada getting the affairs straightened out.

Tried a Second Marriage.

Mrs. Kennedy secured an annulment of her marriage to Hudson, after which Hudson secured a divorce to erase the legal cloud of bigamy. Then he and "Ma" were remarried in a stunt ceremony on a pinnacle overlooking the site of Boulder dam, on the Black cañon of the Colorado river between Arizona and Nevada. Of course, their second honeymoon required more cash, and the rest went to finance him through months of futile efforts to find a job, she said.

Whataman greeted the news with tears. He said he hoped there might still be a reconciliation—if he got a job.

"I won't stand in her way if she wants a divorce," he said. "I refused to be a kept husband; that caused our trouble. I used to go to Las Vegas to get away from crowds.

"She lived on publicity; I'm tired of it," he said. "She doesn't care what the newspapers say about her so long as they say something. I tried to help her get it and had a lot of fun for a while, but it got old."

Mrs. Hutton Critically Ill.

Lake Elsinore, Cal., July 18.—(AP)—Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, evangelist, was reported by her physician today to be in such critical condition that "the slightest shock probably will result in her death."

"Her condition is extremely critical," Dr. Edward H. Williams, the physician, said. "She absolutely must not be disturbed if she is to recover. I have instructed her attendants to see that no one, not even her husband, sees her."

Mrs. Hutton is suffering, her doctor said, from a basal fracture of the skull. She fainted recently when informed her husband, David Hutton, had been found guilty by a jury in a breach of promise suit brought by Myrtle St. Pierre, a nurse, and fell to the floor, striking her head.

Mayor Cermak Better; Takes Ride in Motorboat

Mayor Cermak spent a quiet day yesterday at his summer home near Antioch recuperating from his recent illness. After a light breakfast he took a short ride in his motorboat. In the afternoon he napped and was still asleep early last evening. Members of his family expressed satisfaction at the progress he is making.

DRYS CALLED ON BY A DRY LEADER TO BACK HOOVER

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Led by Fred A. Victor, superintendent, the Anti-Saloon league of New York today called upon drys to vote for President Hoover; condemned the Democratic wet plank and, in general terms, praised the Republican plank.

The fact that Mr. Victor spoke so strongly in favor of the Republican plank—a plank engineered at the national convention by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills—and so emphatically against the repeal Democratic plank, placed him and Mr. Mills in general agreement and, in the opinion of observers, strengthened the argument of Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, president of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, that a vote for the G. O. P. plank, in effect, will be a dry vote.

Moreover, Mr. Victor had nothing to say about a third dry party, an omission expected to have its bearing upon the type of candidate the Republican party in this state nominates for governor.

View on Hoover.

Of President Hoover's dry policies, Mr. Victor said:

"During his entire administration President Hoover has fearlessly sought an effective enforcement of prohibition. Under his leadership the prohibition unit was transferred to the department of justice and men of strong personal character were put in charge of the work.

"Abuses have been eliminated, corruption reduced, enforcement advanced and prohibition made more effective as a result of his wise, courageous, far seeing leadership.

"He has repeatedly declared his belief in the policy of prohibition and his determination to secure the most effective possible enforcement."

Statement on Platform.

In part, this is how Mr. Victor contrasts the two planks of the major parties:

"The Republican plank does not call for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment—the Democratic plank does. The Republican plank does not advocate the modification of the Volstead act—the Democratic plank does. The Republican plank does not favor the legalization of beer—the Democratic plank does. The Republican plank does not pledge public officials or party members to support repeal nor any modification of the eighteenth amendment—the Democratic plank demands such support on the part of party members."

SAFETY FIRST

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

The public should be prudent in seeking relief from pain. Take nothing which does not have the approval of the medical profession.

You can always get Bayer Aspirin. It will never do you any harm, and almost always brings the desired relief. But remember that the high medical endorsement given Bayer Aspirin does not apply to all tablets for the relief of pain.

The doctor is careful to specify Bayer Aspirin for these important reasons:

There are no injurious ingredients in genuine Bayer Aspirin. No coarse particles to irritate throat or stomach. Nothing to upset the system or injure any organ. Not even any disagreeable taste, or any odor. The Bayer process of manufacture insures a pure, uniform product.

And to the absolute safety of the tablet stamped Bayer, add speed. It dissolves so rapidly you get the quickest relief from your headache, cold, neuralgia, neuritis, or other pain.

THE TABLET WITH THIS CROSS BAYER DOES NOT DEPRESS THE HEART

The World's Greatest Tire is LOW PRICED today

Why pay good money for second-choice tires when first-choice costs no more!

DON'T try to guess the price of Goodyear Tires today by what you paid for tires two or three years ago. Crude rubber and cotton—the main materials in a tire—are selling today at prices that cannot continue long.

That means that Goodyear can build the best tire that ever came from the world's greatest rubber factory—at the lowest prices in thirty Summers.

That means you can buy the best tire on the market for the same low price that you pay for second-choice. And in case you do not know what tire is best—the public has answered that question. The public which buys tires votes Goodyears best, by a margin of 2 to 1.

JUSSERAND TO BE BURIED AT HOME OF HIS ANCESTORS

French Diplomat Loved as Friend of U. S.

[Copyright; 1932; By the New York Times.]

PARIS, July 18.—A military funeral was being arranged today for Jules Jusserand, who for twenty-two years was French ambassador at Washington. He died at his home here this morning.

While the date of the funeral has not been set, the services are to be held at the Church of St. Pierre de Chaillot. Interment will be at village of Saint Hoan de Chatel in the Loire, the home of his ancestors.

Jusserand who won the deep affection of the American people during his long service in the United States was in his 77th year. The end came peacefully, his wife's hand clasped in his, after a long illness, which had affected his kidneys.

Felt Death Approaching.

M. Jusserand knew he was going to die and when he spoke to America over the radio on April 10 he told his listeners that they were hearing him "probably for the last time." That farewell message pleading for the friendliness of France and America struck a note which dominated his life since he was appointed ambassador to Washington in 1902.

Three Presidents, Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson, learned to love him for his personal charm and respect him for the ability with which he served France so loyally while being so just to America. His influence counted appreciably when the question of American intervention in the world war arose.

Member of French Academy.

M. Jusserand was a diplomat and a man of letters. His mission in life seemed to be to add to the world's literature in no dilettantish fashion, to cement the friendship between his country and the United States, and to form friendships that were profound and lasting.

Many were the honors accorded to him. He was a member of the French academy—one of the forty immortals. He was also a member of of the Institute, an honorary fellow of the Royal Society of Literature, a corresponding fellow of the British Academy, former president of the American Historical association, honorary member of the Harvard Phi Beta Eppa society, and also of other associations.

Born at Lyon, in the Rhone valley, on Feb. 18, 1855, Jean—Jules, as he was called when a child—was educated in the lycee of his native city and afterwards was graduated from the Universities of Lyon and Paris.

In 1876 he entered the French foreign service at the Quai D'Orsay, serving a while in Tunis.

In 1898 he became minister to Denmark and four years later he was named ambassador to Washington, succeeding Jules Combon.

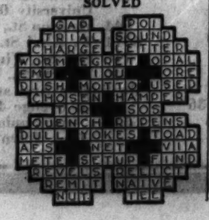
YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED



WIDOW IN FRANCE IS GIVEN ESTATE OF HUNTINGTON

Will Admitted to Probate Here.

The late Douglas St. George Huntington, formely of Chicago but for more than 40 years a resident of France, where he died last July 22, left his $25,000 estate to his widow, Marie de la Londe Huntington, 3 Rue de Granville, Versailles, France, it was disclosed yesterday when his will was admitted to probate.

The will was admitted by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner, after a brief hearing, during which the executor, Murray Nelson, 44 East Oak street, introduced deposition, taken last June in Paris, where the will was drawn in 1927. The will was written with a pen on a sheet of note paper, but six lines long.

Dies After Year's Illness.

Mr. Huntington was the son of the late Maj. Henry Alonzo Huntington, former literary editor of THE TRIBUNE, who was known to an older generation of Chicagoans. In 1927 he married Mlle. Marie de la Londe, daughter of the Comtesse Henry de la Londe of Versailles.

The will and nine others were filed with Mitchell C. Robin, clerk of the Probate court, yesterday. The other wills, the names of the deceased persons, the dates of death, the amount of the estates, the name of the executor, and the chief beneficiaries follow:

Frederick F. Fair, March 18, $7,500, Dr. Frederick Fair, 6818 Paxton avenue, all to widow, Ross.

Otto T. Freer, April 21, $15,000, widow, Martha, 81 East Elm street, $1,000 each two nephews, residue to widow.

Margarete Gutnecht, May 16, $11,340, sister, Johanna Kaiser, 10 friends and relatives share $1,150, $50 to St. Johannes Evangelical Lutheran church, remainder to executrix.

Stella B. Kinn, May 2, $11,000, husband, Charles, 36 West Randolph street. Nephews share land in Vermilion county, husband willed $500, remainder to niece.

Winefred Kirwan, June 3, $20,000, equal shares to James and Anna O'Hara, brother and sister, co-executors.

Arthur Rankin, June 30, $1,000, widow, Ettie, executrix and sole heir.

Anna Senstrom, June 29, $1,000, equal shares to Johnson and Emma Erickson, co-executors.

Jesue Tardif, April 18, $55,000, willed $ 2,000 to St. Louis De France church, Roseland, 26 friends and relatives share residue.

The following petitions were for letters of administration. Similar facts, wi the substitution of the administrator for the executor, show:

Gustav R. Armbruster, May 5, $6,000, widow, Frieda, shares with 2 sons, a daughter.

Mary A. Manning, March 11, 1928, $6,000, daughter, Anna Shea, shares with husband, 7 sisters, 2 sons.

Albert E. Sturtz, Oct. 14, 1931, $21,500, widow, Elizabeth, shares with son.

David Thomas, Feb. 11, $3,000, Julia Griffith, daughter, shares with 3 sisters, 2 brothers.

FUNERAL TODAY IN LA GRANGE FOR REV. ARMSTRONG

Funeral services for the late Rev. Julius C. Armstrong, D. D., former superintendent of the Chicago Congregational union, will be held at 2:30 this afternoon from the First Congregational church, La Grange. Dr. Armstrong died last Saturday. He was 92 years of age.

The services will be in charge of the Rev. Dr. Philip A. Swarts, who will be assisted by the Rev. Dr. C. S. Laidman, associate director of the Congregational union, and Prof. A. C. McGiffert of the Chicago Theological seminary.

Dr. Armstrong was born in a log cabin on the Illinois river near Seneca in 1840 and throughout his entire life was closely associated with the development of Illinois. He enlisted in the 91st Illinois volunteers in 1861 at the age of 18 years and served through the war.

Through Dr. Armstrong's reports as superintendent the late Victor F. Lawson became interested in the work of the Chicago City Missionary society. As a result Mr. Lawson bequeathed $4,500,000 for the endowment of the work of the society. The list of honorary pall bearers for the services this afternoon include leading Congregational clergy and laity of Chicago.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at the Graceland Cemetery chapel for Dr. Mary Elizabeth Hanks, widely known physician and former president of the Chicago Council of Medical Women, who died suddenly on Sunday at her home at 2130 Lincoln Park West. Dr. Hanks was 70 years old and death was attributed to a heart attack. She was unmarried and had no immediate relatives in Chicago.

BRITISH RULERS MOURN DEATH OF LADY BEATTY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 18.—King George sent a message today to Admiral Earl Beatty expressing sympathy in the death of Lady Ethel Beatty, only daughter of the late Marshall Field.

"The queen and I offer you our sympathy in the great loss you and your sons have sustained," the message said. "We shall always remember Lady Beatty's kind and generous personality and she will be widely missed."

Telegrams were also received from the duke of Connaught, former King Alfonso of Spain, and Prince George. Funeral services will take place at the Dingley parish church near Market Harborough on Tuesday.

Donn Byrne's Last Volume Is Published

A Collection of Popular Short Stories.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"A Woman of the Shee," by Donn Byrne. [Century.] Published today.

DONN BYRNE.

PROBABLY no writer of recent years in America had a more exalted reputation for less reason than Donn Byrne. I say that in no spirit of cavil, but merely to do critical justice to the standards of fiction. Donn Byrne wrote one exquisitely beautiful piece of fiction, "Messer Marco Polo," which was a masterpiece of its genre. To many of his readers the Donn Byrne of subsequent novels and short stories was always the Donn Byrne of "Messer Marco Polo"—he was the greatest living Irish writer; he was a genius of the first water.

If you don't believe that is true, ask that fabulous man in the street. If he ever heard the name of Donn Byrne at all he will probably go into panegyrics about him—mark my word. Donn Byrne became a sort of legendary figure in American letters. He was a great prize fighter [who was a greater writer], he was so deeply in love with his native Ireland that he must live there like one of the ancient kings in a great castle. The most fantastic tales spread about his name. And his sudden death in a motor accident in 1928 gave eternal life to the legend of Donn Byrne.

The truth of the matter is that Donn Byrne was a perfectly adequate writer of fiction, with occasional flashes of genius, who chose as his material his countrymen and their ways [that is, the Irish from which he sprang]. He was born in New York, not in Ireland, as the world supposes, but he was taken to Ireland by his parents before he could talk and it was not until 1911 that he came back to America. Meanwhile he had been educated at University college, Dublin, and had become boxing champion of the college—hence the legend of his being a great pugilist lost to the sporting world by turning fictionist.

Since his material was so novel and so much his own, and since he did occasionally achieve something of genius, the public, eager for new heroes, deified him. There are many false notions current about success. Success may be the fickle jade that her twin sister fame is, but neither of them is the unattainable lady that popular fancy believes them to be. The public is avid for new figures to worship, and the public is much more loyal to its literary idols than most of us believe. To me Donn Byrne is the supreme example of such loyalty. I realize that in saying this I am practically taking my life in my hands, so violent and so passionate is the partisanship for Mr. Byrne and his memory, but it is the truth.

The volume of short stories published today—the last that will ever bear his name probably—is a collection of perfectly adequate short stories of the first rate popular magazine caliber, but there is not one story in the book which shows the genius of "Messer Marco Polo." They are excellent popular tales. They will live, however, only because there is a cult for Mr. Byrne more devoted in its adoration than any current literary cult.

There are twelve stories in "A Woman of the Shee," of which the title story is the first—the story of an Irish wife of a ne'er-do-well who went back incognito to her husband's grave to keen there because the only fine thing in his whole ignoble life was his love for his mother, and that stricken mother longed for nothing so much in the world as to hear the banshee keen for her dead son, since the banshee sang her sorrow only over the Fitzjohns who had died in chivalric valor.

"Triangle" is a delightful story of an Irish detective who had never known love until a puppy followed him home one day and drove out of his life (by chance) the one implacable hatred which filled it. And speaking of hatreds, "Mrs. Alexander Tyson is the story of a lifelong hatred which gave a reason for being to the heroine (aged 70). The fact that that hatred was misplaced is, however, so evident to the reader from the first page that the story has little point.

"O Snowy Breasted Pearl" is an Irish love story of one type and "A Marriage Has Been Arranged" an Irish love story of another. "Sargasso Sea" is the story of a seafaring man who tried to become a New York financier, "What Became of Margot Gilholme" the story of a famous toast of England who became a country milliner on Long Island. "Beulah Land" is about a Jew who wanted to go to Zion but found Beulah Land in New York, "A Brevity on Page Three" about a little Italian who found his Beulah Land in the East river, "The Wife of the Red Haired Man" about a mother who had a pious son and an unreliable one and whose love went where it was wanted, and "An Infringement of the Decalogue" about a well done murder.

"The Honorable of the Earth" is about a tremendously wealthy man who had dreams of founding a great commercial family which should carry on his ideals of business, and who when he found exactly the kind of person his daughter had married in a Polish prince, gave his entire fortune back to the workers who had made it for him.

Admirers of Donn Byrne will rush out to buy "A Woman of the Shee" and even after they have read it they probably won't believe a word I've said against him in this column!

Time Arrives to Buy Hats of Black Velvet

Women Follow Customs of Summer.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

DEPEND upon it, the feminine sex isn't half as changeable as advertised. Potent persuasion and lots of it is necessary before we gals relinquish our prerogative to rush perversely to the stores and buy and wear new velvet hats while the sun sizzles. We are creatures of habit, habits of the kind to make us noticeable, and this summer habit of wearing black sooty velvet atop our heads is indeed too spectacular a one to give up.

Wearing black velvet hats when all the wilting males are just beginning to get acquainted with their pet panamas, seems to be one way of getting these same cautious and criticizing males to forget the depression, anyway.

For whatever reason you wear them, you can begin any time now, for the newest collections are shining in nearly every shop . . . audacious little lid like affairs that will cling even more precariously than last year's models, on one side of your coiffure.

The first thing you will have to do before you can wear these new models successfully is to have your hair cut and curled properly . . . and that means cut, and cut thin and short if you have long bobs. Curls and short saucy haircuts are needed for these new velvets.

If you are a brunette it will be easy for you to go in for pert wind-blown bobs to accent these cock-eyed tams which cover exactly one side and darn little of that one side of your head.

Some of the most extreme new models will be anchored with a net which has every appearance of a hair net. You can defy the wind of the boulevard with such a hat. Another half and half idea is made of the softest silk velvet in black with the direct contrast of snow white feathered wings forming the half section that fits snugly to your head as an anchor.

Berets made of velvet stitched in rows and then cut in quarter sections and sewed together at right angles make rakish affairs that can be worn devastatingly low over one eye and on only half the head. They are typical artists berets with all the sloshing bravado of the starving storybook genius who paints in a Paris attic.

Gay little hats that are not any larger than a tippet with frivolous bows and loops seem doubly naughty and nice when they are made of sleek black velvet . . . you wear them with knowing effect with summer "sheers" and with just the right accent of insouciance for dining, dancing, and the theater. They are almost skull cups worn askew, contrasted with jeweled clips or pins.

Not all the new models are extreme, for Agnes sends a model that boasts a small, shallow, but immensely flattering brim that turns skyward . . . you can tell an Agnes model immediately by the intricate and clever draping that distinguishes each hat she designs.

And the draped turbans that never lose their fashion smartness are also swathed of rich, supple, glistening black velvet. Shoppers who have a weakness for the crisp contrast of white organdy will find some fascinating combinations of velvet and organdy in these black velvet collections now on display.

Here's Picture of Home Where Ice Is Needed

Reporter Visits Family on Summer Day.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

A tribe from hottest Africa might have been comfortable yesterday in the N—— family shelter on West Chicago avenue. But a social worker trudging up that steep and narrow stairway, steamingly, smotheringly hot from the expanse of west wall where the sun's rays beat down unopposed, mopped her face despairingly. And a reporter behind her, studying the need for free ice from THE TRIBUNE'S fund, gasped for breath.

It seemed a long way, in that torrid temperature, to the door at the end of the hallway behind which the N——s live. The door opened and the callers escaped inside without waiting the formality of an invitation from a little girl with big dark eyes and a shock of curly bobbed black hair. Inside, it developed, wasn't much better.

A kettle simmering on the stove emitted an odor of boiling greens. Three other little girls with identical dark eyes and mops of black hair, clustered in the kitchen where Mrs. N——, who speaks no English, was preparing a meal.

No ice here. Just a big saucepan set in the sink, with the cool water running continuously into it to try to preserve the two bottles of milk obtained from a relief station. Vain effort. One was already sour. Mrs. N—— shrugged her shoulders in utter discouragement as the largest little girl interpreted her flow of explanation in Greek.

This and thousands of families in similar circumstances have been besieging the charities for ice in recent weeks. Even the days that are comparatively cool leave food spoiled without that protection. Donations of any size are welcome to help out in the tremendous need. Those received yesterday were:

Nurserymen Claim Slump Has Aroused Interest in Homes

Gardening and home improvement have come into prominence this season, as economic conditions leave people with more time on their hands, E. C. Hilborn, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, told the opening session of the three day convention at the Stevens hotel yesterday.

The nurserymen say American families have been brought to realize that "artificial riches may disappear over night, but that a beautiful home is a most satisfactory form of wealth."

Fishing Movie Is Pleasant, Joyful Trip

Produced by Principal Pictures, Inc. Presented at the Castle theater. Featuring Zane Grey.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

O, he went to sea in a ship, he did!
In a ship he went to sea!
And twixt marine larks
And catching sharks
He wrote of the lone prairie.

Now, you'd never think, would you—or would you?—that Zane Grey wrote his western thrillers in mid-ocean? Believe it or not, a press sheet before me avers:

". . . He writes best about the desert when at sea, and his adventures thereon when on the desert . . ."

All of which, really, makes no never mind, because today our subject is not the best sellers of the author whose vogue was established with the tale of "Betty Zane," but with a glorious, seafaring adventure in which Mr. Grey plays hero.

Here's a real life fishing picture to make your very pores cry for the woods and waters. It depicts the fulfillment of a dream. From boyhood, you are told, the writer had yearned to own "a white ship with sails like wings," and, on it, pursue the big fish of southern seas. In "South Sea Adventures" he secures the boat and catches the fish. Happy man!

But don't get the idea that this trip was just a happy-go-lucky more or less aimless jaunt. No indeed. Mr. Grey started forth with a definite object in view. That object was to break the world's record for making the largest piscatorial catch on record. "Never mind the expense!" said he to those who were engaged in fitting out the expedition. They didn't. Spent a million, I understand—BUT—Mr. Grey did achieve his object—caught a 1,300 pound marlin [swordfish]—and at the moment of writing is, I understand, the champion he set out to be.

The battle with the captured marlin is no more exciting than one the fisherman has with a like monster that breaks his heart by finally escaping. Both of these bouts keep you agog—as we say in cross-word puzzles—and are the sporting highlights of the picture. But "South Sea Adventures" is not only concerned with fishing. The film drops you off at various points along the way and introduces you to fascinating scenery, laughing natives and odd customs.

The photography throughout is magnificent and there are several views of racing waves—"wild horses of the sea," the author calls them—that are the loveliest things you ever saw!

A pleasing voice describes the various vicinities and activities as the picture progresses.

Fascinating, this trip you take at the Castle theater, with, possibly, the world's most prolific writer! And all for two bits!

See you soon.

Friends Pay Surprise Party Visit to Henry Ishams at Lake Geneva

Bus Load of Lake Foresters Make Journey to Resort; Boat Ride Is Feature of Happy Affair.

NEVER did I hear of a nicer surprise party nor one that was more of a surprise than the house party that descended upon the Henry Ishams at Lake Geneva Saturday, a busload of their friends from Lake Forest, men, women, and children.

There were 16 in the party, including several maids, and every one had a ham or a chicken or something edible so that the party would not be too overpowering or inconvenient for the surprised host and hostess.

Saturday night the party chartered one of the public boats on the lake—it used to be a private yacht—and took a ride around the lake and from all accounts a grand time was had by all! The Daniel R. Winters, who were in the party, are staying on in the Ishams' guest house for a month, but the rest of the guests returned yesterday. Also in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert E. Porter III., the Kent Chandlers, the John H. Hamlines, and the Richard D. Stevensons.

Last Saturday morning the C class race on the lake had to be postponed because of there being no wind but the A class race for the Chalmers trophy was held in the afternoon. Commodore Ernest Schmidt was the winner, Col. William N. Pelouze was second and "Bud" Gartz was third.

Mrs. Clyde M. Carr expects that about 100 women will assemble this morning at her residence in Lake Forest for the first of four lectura recitals by Lee Pattison. It is to be an all Chopin program this morning. On the committee with Mrs. Carr that has arranged the recitals are Mrs. Slason Thompson, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. Joseph Cudahy, Mrs. William G. Hibbard, Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, and Miss Gwethalyn Jones.

Women Busy With Benefits.

In spite of the warm weather benefit plans for next fall and winter are going along under the guidance of philanthropically minded women. Two such women are leaving their inviting country places this week and making trips into the city to hear reports about the progress of ticket and box sales.

Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum will come in to town today from Longcroft, her summer place near South Haven, Mich., to see about the sale of tickets for next fall's Passavant hospital benefit. The affair is to be a concert by Lawrence Tibbett on Sunday, Nov. 6. Tickets and boxes may be reserved through Mrs. Charles Corsant, who is at Chedna Farms, Big Bay, Mich., for the summer.

Mrs. William S. Monroe, chairman of the committee working for the Girl Scout benefit concerts to be given next fall, will come to Chicago on Thursday for a meeting of her workers to be held at her townhouse, 62 East Elm street. The Girl Scout organization has taken over the boxes and most of the main floor seats for five concerts to be given at Orchestra hall, beginning with Lucretia Bori on Oct. 17. The other artists will be Schipa, Chaliapin, Heifetz, and Onegin.

Mrs. Phelps Kelley and Mrs. W. David Owen are among the north shore women planning to take their own children and some of their young friends to see "The Magic Whistle," a play to be given by the Jack and Jill children's theater group next Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons in the outdoor theater on Mrs. Howard Van Doren's estate in Lake Forest for the benefit of Druce Tolse camp.

Exchange Sale in East.

From Magnolia, Mass., comes the news that north shore residents (Massachusetts' north shore, not Chicago's) are expected to assemble in large numbers today and tomorrow at Sun Dial, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Farnum, for the annual exhibition and sale of the Woman's Exchange of Chicago.

This is the fourth year that Mrs. Farnum has acted as hostess for the sale. Among those assisting her today and tomorrow will be her sister, Miss Helen B. Drake.

The first of a series of lectures to be given at Castle Hill, the Ipswich estate of Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., for the benefit of the Benjamin Stickney Cable Memorial hospital at Ipswich, will be given Friday. The Rev. Carroll Perry will talk on "The Life and Art of Edwin Booth."

Mrs. Donald Frost of Boston is in Lake Forest for a fortnight's visit with her mother, the senior Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson. Donald Frost Jr., who came from the east with his mother, departed on Saturday night for the west. He'll meet his cousin, Joseph T. Ryerson Jr., who is in California with his mother and sisters, and the two boys will spend the balance of their holiday at a ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Hoamer have gone to their summer place near St. Joseph, Mich. Their daughter, Mrs. Templeton Brown of St. Joseph, Mo., and her young son are spending a month with them.

Mrs. Albert G. Simms (Ruth Hanna McCormick), who came from Washington for the funeral yesterday of Mrs. Robert S. McCormick, returned east again yesterday on a late afternoon train bound for New York. She and Mr. Simms will sail tonight for Europe.

The entire Laird Bell family is deserting Winnetka for the rest of the summer. Helen and Frances, the two older girls, started west in their car on Sunday with Miss Jane Brooks for Laramie, Wyo. Frances will visit at the Philip Moores' ranch for a few days and then will join the other two girls at Tepee lodge. Mr. and Mrs. Bell and their youngest daughter, Nathalie, will depart the end of this week for the Puget sound region, where Helen and Frances will meet them later. They'll all return to Winnetka in September.

Travel Plans Revealed.

Mrs. Jacob Baur is planning to leave Friday for Vancouver to meet her daughter, the former Rosemary Baur, and her husband, Bartle Bull, upon their return from around the world honeymoon. Their marriage took place here last November.

Mrs. Charles Edward Brown and her two year old son have gone east to spend the remainder of the summer with Mrs. Brown's mother, Mrs. William Deshler, at Southampton. Mr. Brown will join them later. Miss Betty Brown is a guest of Miss Paula Uihlein

Handsome Fire Screen Recalls Theater Event

Piece from Stage of 1872 Used in Home.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

There's at least one furnishing in the Charles Krutckoff home at Long Beach, Ind., that never fails to evoke the admiring comments of their many week-end guests. And that is the handsome fire screen in the east living room where the family likes to gather on a cool summer evening.

Unlike most hearth screens it is made of a brass netting flanked on either side by columns so classically severe in their straight architectural lines the piece might easily be dated in the Louis Seize era. When Mrs. Krutckoff took it to one of the city's art shops to be polished recently, the manager with much exclamation declared he'd never before seen anything like it. In fact, he only regretted that it was not his to sell, for during the week that his assistants were working on the screen five patrons asked to purchase it.

But Mrs. Krutckoff wouldn't part with the piece for any amount, since it's an inheritance from the Pullman family. Then, too, there's a pretty story associated with it that's always worth retelling.

It was on the evening of Oct. 21, 1872, that society turned out in brilliant array for the opening of Hooley's theater on Randolph between Clark and La Salle streets. In one of the boxes sat Mrs. R. W. Rathburne, born Emma Pullman, the daughter of Albert B. Pullman, who for many years was vice president of the Pullman company. The production was the spectacular ballet pantomime "The Three Hunchbacks," danced by the Abbot-Kiralfy troupe. The fire screen was a part of the stage setting.

Mrs. Rathburne sat attentive through the performance. She liked the dancing, the setting, the fire screen in particular. When the final curtain fell she had one thought . . . to see the director of the troupe, to make him promise that he would sell the hearthpiece to her when his company disbanded. He did promise, because, as he often told jokingly afterward, he couldn't resist "her charming powers of persuasion."

Memories of that evening were often revived in later years by the Pullmans and by many another prominent Chicago family. For, as THE TRIBUNE reported the next morning, "A tasteful dramatic temple was dedicated. Everything was decent and in order, giving evidence of the restoration and progress of our city. Congratulations were showered on Manager Hooley, whose opera house burned two years ago. The audience was composed of our best citizens, elegantly attired women and correspondingly arrayed men."

In due course of time after that opening night the screen arrived at the Rathburne home and for years was a cherished piece. In fact it was only a short time ago that Mrs. Krutckoff, a first cousin of Mrs. Rathburne, acquired it along with some lovely Dresden and Copeland china, and any number of art effects that once belonged to various branches of the Pullman family.

It's a warm subject for these days, but worth noting nevertheless, that anything in the way of fireplace appointments was quite unknown before the 18th century and it wasn't until late in that century that the advantage of careful design was bestowed upon a grate or a fender. The reason back of refinement in this period was the increasing use of coal.

For strange as it may seem wood was preferred to coal as a domestic fuel until Queen Anne's period. The first record indicating that our medieval forbears were aware of the combustible nature of coal is dated 1239, when a charter was granted the people of Newcastle to dig for the fuel. But the people of London objected so much to its "stink and smoke" that parliament went so far in 1306 as to petition the king to prohibit its use.

For centuries the prejudice continued. Persons fancied that food cooked over a coal fire would poison them. There were some fastidious ladies who chose to imagine that their complexions would be spoiled if they "sate" in the same room with a coal fire.

Members of the women's auxiliary of the Cook county fair will be entertained today at 12:30 p. m. in the Administration building of the Century of Progress exposition. The fair will be held at River road and North avenue from Aug. 5 to Aug. 14. The committee includes: Mrs. N. W. MacChesney, Mrs. Bessie Bragg Pierson, Mrs. Herman N. Bundesen, Mrs. William Westlund, Mrs. Marco Adragna, Miss Caroline McIlvaine, Mrs. Frank L. Birdey, Mrs. Frank L. Richardson, Mrs. James E. Oliver, Mrs. G. V. Gray, Miss Emily Napieralski, Mrs. Bertha Moller Delin, and Mrs. John E. Ericsson.

I Like You So Much

BY MAY EDGINTON

SYNOPSIS.

Gold Franklyn calls Dr. Elverton, who has a surgery in a poor district of London, to attend her indolent, dependent young half brother. The doctor offers to give Barney Pierce, a well to do accident victim, a lift to his destination, and Pierce waits while the doctor makes his call. He catches a glimpse of the pretty young creature who summoned the doctor. Both men determine to help the plucky orphan girl. The doctor is to sail the next week to New York and Havana on a leave, taking the ship doctor's place. Mrs. Doria Hathaway, a widow, friend of Pierce's, is to sail on the same boat. She wants a maid-companion for the Atlantic crossing. The doctor sends Gold to see Mrs. Hathaway and she gets the job. Pierce regrets putting Gold under the demoralizing influence of Doria. He decides to sail himself. On the boat Doria meets David Dorrance, who wants to interest Pierce in a business deal. Doria asks Gold to dine with her. They are joined by Pierce and Dorrance. Gold is angered by Pierce's cynicism and distrust of women. Gip Alen, Gold's half brother, stows away on the boat and threatens to disclose his identity unless Gold does as he bids. Pierce, who overhears Gip's threats, unknown to Gold, arranges to get him third class passage on condition he doesn't bother Gold.

INSTALLMENT XX.

A BUSINESS OFFER.

The doctor looked at Doria, and she stirred him profoundly, as she had done at his first sight of her; so warm and gay; so unsatisfied. His pity and his interest had been roused by Gold Franklyn; but this was different; this emotion was close at his heart.

"What are you thinking?" Doria asked.

"I was thinking of you."

"You must be a very fashionable doctor; your manner is perfect."

"I am a very poor, obscure, tired and unfashionable doctor indeed."

"It's horrible being poor and tired."

"How do you know?"

"I've been both. But I've forgotten it."

"Pity. It's a thing to remember."

"Why?"

"It keeps you kind."

"Aren't I kind?"

"In spite of yourself, I think you are."

"I believe in hardening one's heart, doctor. When I was soft I was miserable. Now—"

"Now?"

"Couldn't you put up a little longer with me alone?" the doctor asked, meaning it.

She looked away. Wasn't she likely to be miserable again? And she heard Elverton telling her:

"Now you are still soft. But I hope you won't be unhappy."

She smiled brilliantly. "Well, never mind. Do you know where my two cavaliers are this morning?"

"I think they are in the smokeroom talking business."

"O, business! Shucks!"

Gold returned to them, wrapped in her tweed coat—the doctor remembered it. "Honey," called Doria, "just go into the smokeroom and ask those two men of mine to come right out here to me."

"Couldn't you put up a little longer with me alone?" the doctor asked; meaning it. It was not badinage; he definitely wanted this affecting red-haired woman to himself.

She smiled brilliantly again: "I can manage three. I like a crowd."

As Gold Franklyn moved away again, Doria heard this persistent doctor telling her something else about herself: "No. You don't really like a crowd at all."

Gold-Franklyn stood at the entrance to the big smokeroom. At this time in the morning there were no women in the smokeroom; only a quiet steward or two serving the noon cocktails. She did not want to enter alone this world of men, but stood on the threshold, looking for Pierce and Dorrance. And all at once, as her eyes searched, Barney stood at her elbow.

"Do you want to come in here?"

"No. Mrs. Hathaway sent me to ask you and Mr. Dorrance to join her on deck."

Dorrance rose from the table where they had been sitting, and came up too.

"Morning, Miss Franklyn."

His good-humored eyes openly admired her.

She repeated her message.

"Of course, we'll come at once. We couldn't disregard that lovely lady."

Now they went, all three, out to the promenade deck, where Elverton still lingered beside Doria.

Doria had been thinking a good deal about Barney Pierce that morning. She knew—she told herself—that she had given herself away—her feelings, her frettings, her impatience, she had laid them all before him for inspection. She had been silly. It was careless. The most difficult man in the world for a woman to play was surely this Barney Pierce. She had been thinking of the most obvious of all tactics—competition; resultant jealousy. Sometimes a man, even a man as cold as this one, would, if no hotter emotion were yet involved, have his sense of sportsmanship roused, and fight for a pretty woman if rivals were cleverly handled.

So Doria, acute but not clever, shrewd but short-sighted, was determined on her day's tactics by the time the two men, with Gold Franklyn between them, had reached her; and her tactics would have kept Dorrance and Elverton on either side of her, with Pierce cold-shouldered, if Dorrance had not frustrated it.

The silk magnate was in quiet but tremendous good humor; the business outlook promised; all shaped well. But he was not going to put so much as the frailest spoke in Pierce's wheel. He maneuvered so that it was Pierce who took the chair on Doria's right, while the doctor remained—rather pertinaciously, Dorrance thought, for so tactful a fellow—on her left. He himself drew Gold Franklyn, as if for an instant's survey, to the bulwarks. He unslung his glasses from his shoulders. "There's a little trader away there, to port. You'll want to take a look."

He held the glasses, adjusting them, for the girl.

"O, thank you."

She saw, looming up towards her, the clear picture of the little schooner, low in the water, heavy with freight.

"You know, I hate butting in," Dorrance murmured confidentially near her ear. "Those two behind us—if only the doctor would leave 'em alone—"

"Yes," she murmured as confidentially, as understandingly, and chafed at the pain in her heart.

He took his glasses, touched her elbow. "And now, move over here, and look that way; and—"

Now they were quite out of earshot of their group, though keeping in sight. Because, "Mrs. Hathaway may want me," she explained.

"Not as much as she wants some one else. We can stand here for a few minutes. There's something I want to say to you."

She remembered acutely: There was something Barney Pierce also wanted to say to her.

"You made me awfully concerned for you, crossing like this without a job to go to, unless you're definitely sure that your little lady will redeem her promise about return fare." His tone was a little dry. "Now there is something temporary—leading perhaps to something else—that I can offer you right away."

"O!"

The girl was radiant. "Gosh!" he murmured, "how your eyes shine! It's this. It would surely be nice for you to make this Havana trip, especially as Mrs. Hathaway will still be on board—a sort of—in a way—a sort of guarantee to you of . . . . O, I don't know. No girl troubles about guarantees of safety nowadays, does she?"

"Certainly not! How silly!"

"Well, not always silly. Still, in this case the whole thing is all right anyway. I'm me; you're you," he said comfortably. "This business I've been discussing with our friend Pierce is going swimmingly; it's almost a certainty already that I'll have a lot of clerical work, plans and estimates to draft, and so on—within the next fortnight. And we want to keep it all very quiet. What quieter place than a ship, even packed full of holiday people? I had been meaning—if I could advance things far enough beforehand—to take the Havana trip. I shall have to have a good stenographer with me. You're competent?"

"I am."

"I offer you the job. When we get back finally to New York, if you're satisfactory, I'll find you something in my office, if the authorities let you stay. You've got to be quiet—quiet, you understand; no gossip; not a word. And you'll have to work. I shall want all that I want, done by the time we finally get back."

GASOLINE ALLEY—ANOTHER CHAPTER ENDED

ANOTHER ATTEMPT, 1758, WAS TO BE MADE TO DRIVE THE FRENCH FROM FORT DUQUESNE AT THE FORKS OF THE OHIO.
AFTER MUCH DELAY WASHINGTON AND HIS VIRGINIA TROOPS WERE GIVEN THE POSITION OF ADVANCE PARTY. AND THE EXPEDITION MOVED AHEAD, EVER ON THE ALERT, EXPECTING AN AMBUSH BY THE INDIANS.
BUT THERE WAS NO SIGN OF EITHER FRENCH OR INDIANS.
I'D LIKE TO HEAR SOME BULLETS WHISTLE—WOULDN'T YOU, COL. WASHINGTON?
COMING WITHIN SIGHT OF THE FORT THEY FOUND ONLY SMOKING RUINS. THE FRENCH HAD BURNED IT, HAD TAKEN TO THE BOATS AND RETREATED DOWN THE OHIO. THUS FORT DUQUESNE WHICH HAD COST SO MUCH IN LIFE, MONEY AND EFFORT WAS NOW THEIRS WITHOUT BLOODSHED OR RESISTANCE.
AND THAT'S THAT!

Sold as Slave of Producer, Is Dvorak Charge

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Ann Dvorak, the film star, who arrived here by ship today from Los Angeles, complained that she was "sold down the river" by Howard Hughes, the producer.

Miss Dvorak said that while her body appears to be her own, her soul or talent is claimed by Hughes, who has a contract with her by which he agrees to pay her $250 a week. Having no work for Miss Dvorak, she says, he loaned her to Warner brothers for $1,000 a week. But all he gave Miss Dvorak was the $250.

And not only that, says Miss Dvorak. In her last picture for Warner brothers, in which she was starred, an anonymous baby, playing a bit, was paid $500 a week.

So she went right to her doctor and got a certificate that she needed a long vacation, sailing from Los Angeles on the Panama Pacific liner Virginia, which docked today. Miss Dvorak was accompanied by her husband since last March, Leslie Fenton, who performs equally well before the screen or in the spoken drama.

WEDDING

The marriage of Miss Darthea Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Campbell of Cape Girardeau, Mo., to Charles E. Yerkes III., son of Mrs. Charles E. Yerkes of Evanston, was solemnized at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the chapel of St. Mark's church in Evanston. Floyd Wohlwend of Evanston was best man for the groom. The bride had no attendants. Mr. Yerkes is a grandson of the late Charles T. Yerkes, one-time Chicago traction magnate.

Vera Borea Laces Jacket and Skirt of Brown Suit with Beige Colored Cord

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—With the return of dresses that button up behind, relics of the gay nineties, comes the style for lacing up the smart suit. It is true that the modern corset is guiltless of lacings, but the lacing of 1932 takes place on the outside. Women buying sports suits to wear along the Cote d'Azur are choosing them with the laced skirt, as shown in today's sketch.

The way this skirt is made to fit without a wrinkle is by the same method that the trousers of the French sailor around Toulon are fitted, that is by making them skin tight from hips to top and then lacing them up in front. Vera Borea, who designed this suit, adds similar lacings to the back of the jacket, along the shoulders, as shown in the background of the sketch, but this is simply for decoration.

The jacket and skirt of this suit are made of brown tussor, and the skirt is cut in four gores that widen below the hips to give it width without flare. The top of the skirt rises above the normal waistline, and the lacing in front is done with biege cord. The Eton jacket has sleeves with little standing petals of brown tussor just below the armholes, and it has a tailored collar and revers stitched flat to the jacket front. In back there is a V shaped yoke laced up at the top.

The blouse of this suit is also amusing. It is made of the same cord that functions to lace up the skirt.

ENGAGEMENT

Mrs. R. F. Chatillon of Syracuse, N. Y., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Mary A., to William D. Dunning, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Dunning of Syracuse. Miss Chatillon, daughter of the late R. F. Chatillon, and a granddaughter of Mrs. T. J. Lefens of Chicago, was graduated from Farmington and from Miss Nixon's school in Florence, Italy. She is a member of the Junior league. Mr. Dunning prepared for college at St. Paul's school and was graduated from Yale in 1924.

Brains Versus Beauty in the Marriage Mart

BY DORIS BLAKE.

With successful marraige in mind and a Good Fairy approaching you armed with the proverbial three gifts, which would you choose—beauty, charm or brains?

The idea emanates from a sister columnist on a metropolitan daily. We lift the idea to give you a debating theme, should your bridge talk run dry. More, we take the idea to set you thinking seriously on the theme, extracting from it such helpful hints as must accrue.

It's no idle rumor that women of unusual beauty make the poorest success of marriages, particularly if they have tested any public acclaim. Marriage doesn't discourage them. They are our best little repeaters, as a rule. Try, try again is their motto, with not too much emphasis on the TRY. There is in the air the assurance that there'll always be another man willing to take u pthe burden of support. Or, with luck and a large box office return, the supporting becomes a minor detail.

Taking beauties by and large, they do not make the successful marriages expected of them, for some reason or another. Perhaps it's the law of compensation. One person cannot get everything out of life. More likely, it is because beauty hasn't the brains behind it to manage life successfully. Too, beauty's habit is to take—not give. And that little clause gums up the successful marriage machinery. Here we're talking of the professional beauty type—not the beautiful wife every husband knows is to be found in his own home.

It's the habit to decry the advantages of brains—well, of the exposition of brains, then—in a woman if she would get on well with men. Nevertheless, it's brains that sees a marriage through to a successful finish. And the daily use of them, too. It takes brains to sidestep occasions of disagreement. It takes brains to smooth down the ruffled feathers. It takes brains to know when to talk and when not to talk. And it takes brains to run efficiently, economically, and decoratively a menage for husbandly pride.

Fair Grounds Party Will Be One of the Best

Urge Children to Write Letters Now.

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

There are so many things to be done and such a variety of interesting things to see at the Century of Progress exposition where we are to have a party that the hundred boys and girls who win invitations to it can be assured of a rollicking good time.

There is the amusement park on the Midway along the lake front, for one thing. Here are the most exciting and newest rides to be found. The Lindy Loop and the Hey Dey, fast, zippety things that whirl you over steel hills and valleys with a velocity that fairly takes your breath away. There's the Bozo, the Cyclone, and the Funnies—rides you've never seen anywhere else, and they are packed with thrills. We'll try them all out, too, on our party day, Thursday, July 28.

A little farther down the broad avanue flanked on either side by the handsome, unusual and interesting buillings which will house the exhibits from all over the world when the fair opens next year, one comes upon Fort Dearborn and the group of Lincoln buildings. The former is a replica of the frontier fort which was built on the banks of the river in 1803. The cabins have been constructed on the rooms reproduced to resemble exactly those where the pioneers lived and worked and fought and laid the foundation of what is now our own Chicago.

Huge stone fireplaces are found in every room and the walls are decorated with the skins of animals that roamed the prairie around the original fort. There's the blockhouse which was used as a lookout by the soldiers. We can climb up to the top of it, too, and imagine that we are scouting for Indians or look out ove rthe beautiful lake which seemed particularly blue and expansive the day I visited there. Fort Dearborn is so close to the noise and bustle of Chicago, but once you get within the large walls surrounding it you forget entirely that the city is anywhere near you and you are living again in those thrilling frontier days.

Then there's the Florida alligator farm where we can count on seeing one of the grandest shows that's been in this part of the country in years. The principal performers are the alligators and they are assisted by the daring boys who at one time during the performance dive into the tanks of the 'gators and wrestle with them.

If you'd like to be with me at this marvelous party a week from next Thursday you had better get to work at a winning letter. Remember I shall invite the hundred boys and girls who can convince me that they'd have a good time. The letters must be in by Thursday morning; they should contain your age, your name and address, and in them you may not ask for an invitation for any one but yourself.

Child Asks for Advice Dealing with Grownups

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Here is a plea for help from a new source:

"My dear Mrs. Bevans: Will you please send me your booklet, 'How to Gain Obedience?' I find I have little difficulty with this problem. It is really simple in my family, but perhaps you have some additional tricks to give me. I just have a tantrum, or do a little wholehearted screaming, and I find I get almost instantaneous obedience from my mother and my father! I know that many other children use this same psychology. It isn't new—it's as old as the hills, but it still continues to work like a charm

"I should also like your booklet on 'Make Patience Your Handmaiden.' My mother could improve a little in this respect, and I could, too, I think. I do get SO impatient with her commands, and she gets SO impatient with my impatience.

"Patience is one of the most important qualities a mother should possess, I think. My mother is swell: I wouldn't exchange her for any of the mothers my friends have, but patience is NOT her strong point. It would be so easy to manage me if she only knew how. I'm not really difficult. But she is SO nervous—why are mothers often so nervous?—and that makes it harder to handle the situations that will arise.

"You see, I'm full of pep and adventure and life, and I go barging around the house having a fine time with books—though I'm not STUDIOUS—and dishes and telephones and everything else I can lay my hands on, and for some reason mother doesn't like it. Does she expect me to just sit around the floor and twiddle my thumbs? And so we're in hot water most of the time and things get pretty thick. I do hope that this 'Patience' booklet will help her.

"Some of my friends and I—we are mostly around 2 years old—are going to start a little informal mothers' study group. We'll meet in the back yard after nap time and just discuss these various problems we are up against in handling our mothers—patience, tantrums, eating, how to get what you want, what character building our mothers need, and various other problems that come up from time to time. Anything that will be helpful to us that you could send me will be much appreciated. Sincerely yours, JIN JUNIOR."

Mr. and Mrs. Thorne Donnelley will depart today to spend several weeks in New York City and at Saratoga for the races. When they return they will go to their estate at Bardstown, Ky., for the rest of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilton B. Martin will start west tomorrow in their car for a holiday of about five weeks. They will stop first at Colorado Springs for a visit with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Channing Sweet and their children, and then they'll go on to California.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Yager are planning to go west about the first of August. They'll spend a few days at their Beverly Hills, Cal., estate, and look in at the Olympics before sailing for a trip to Honolulu. They'll linger in California again on their way back from Honolulu, returning to Chicago in late September.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Flannigan of White Plains, N. Y., spent the weekend with the junior Alfred D. Piamondons in Lake Forest, having come west for the Classic at Arlington Saturday. Mrs. Flannigan is the former Aimee Magnus of Chicago. The Piamondons' other guests for the weekend were the Edwin C. Fords and the Ralph N. Gardners of Chicago.

Joan Bennett Keeps Smiling at Bad Luck

Infected Throat Is Latest of Troubles.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., July 18.—Joan Bennett has had a run of distressing illnesses and accidents. Ever since her broken hip it has been one thing or another.

When she started a trip to New York some months ago after being released from the plaster cast, she cut her hand badly on the top of a bottle of bath salts. As she was to take the boat the next day, for the long convalescent voyage to New York, her own surgeon applied first aid treatment and the ship's surgeon took care of it on the voyage. It healed with a long scar across her hand and when she had finished "Week Ends Only" she spent an unpleasant week having the scar on her hand fixed by a plastic surgeon.

Then followed a sprained ankle, incurred in stepping from her car into loose sand near her beach house. This brought back the crutches she thought she had discarded permanently after her broken hip.

Now, a cold and infected throat have been keeping Miss Bennett feeling somewhat wretched, but through it all she preserves the pleasant, patient, plucky disposition which is one of this girl's characteristics.

Joan says she did a lot of "thinking about life," and what she intended for herself and expected of life, during the long hours in bed with her hip in a cast, and that she saw "some new values." She began to take notice of simple things, and people about her, which had never caught her interest before in her hurried and colorful young career, and she said a change came in her mental attitude toward people about her.

This youngest of the Bennetts is a girl who is wise as well as clever; not the metally scintillant type like her sister, Constance, but one who believes it worth while to apply hard work in seeking to be constantly a better actress.

Joan Bennett is not above going to her father, Richard Bennett, and getting his advice on points of technique in acting. Those closest to her adore her with a warmth of affection not evoked by her more brilliant sister There are many who feel that in the long uphill pull for continued popular favor Joan is likely to last longer than Constance, who started out with more glitter, and at present crowns the top of the heap.

Mary Astor, back from Honolulu where her infant daughter was born last month, is going to buy baby bootees by resuming screen career. She's signed for one picture, "Those We Love," for Tiffany.

Charles Morton, who was thrice started toward the movie heights by the Fox company, but whose rise was interrupted by his getting too fat, by his marital trouble and annulment from Lola Medona, South American actress, and one year ago by his fall from a horse, is back in films and has a subordinate rôle at Paramount in Marlene Dietrich's film "Blonde Venus." Morton suffered a fracture in his horseback fall, and was in the hospital for months.

The number of actors and actresses at present holding contracts at the seven big studios—Warner-First National, Radio, MGM, Paramount, Fox, Universal, and Columbia—totals 221. At this time last year 267 were under contract. The reduction in salary totals now being paid out is just as conspicuously under the 1931 total, I am told, but figures are not available. One close follower says that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's salary cut of from 5 per cent (applying to $50 a week pay envelopes) to 35 per cent (over $1,500 a week) will save that studio more than $35,000 a week.

Sylvia Sidney Dispenses with Arts of Makeup

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Sylvia Sidney is that very delightful experience in an interviewer's life, a complete and happy surprise. Charming, disarming, and a girl with the courage to hew to her own simple line of dress. Perhaps dress does not intrigue her time and interest. Or maybe she has that rare sixth sense that directs a wardrobe so that the girl becomes much more important than the dress, a talent couturiers ascribe to the best dressed of women.

We lunched in Miss Sidney's suite in the Waldorf recently. She wore a dullish blue silk dress, mostly simply cut. No rings, no bracelet. The slenderest of gold chains was round her neck, from which may have hung an amulet, a cross of the Hope diamond, for all we know. Whatever it was, was hidden in the neck folds of the dress. An intriguing note. Oxford type shoes of brown suede and leather were worn.

Not a particle of makeup was on Miss Sidney's lip, cheek, or eyelid. Not a mascaraed lash. Refreshing, we call it, to see a face like that these days! We wish there might be a Sylvia "makeupless" movement among her young admirers.

We wish, too, they'd copy clever simple dress atmosphere for the natural tone of cheek and lip. It's an experiment worth trying, if you're young, as is Miss Sylvia herself. It would too often submerge their beauty gifts with too much makeup enthusiasm. Too bad, too, she thinks, for never again in their lives will they meet with the opportunity to present youth in so good a light.

If you expected to meet in the flesh a dyed-in-the-wool brunette in Miss Sylvia you'd be doomed to disappointment. That is, you'd be disappointed if she didn't substitute, as she does, an unusual pair of blue eyes, whose wide setting creates equal interest with their periwinkle coloring. There's intelligence behind that eye scene, lots and lots of it.

Her nose is amusingly small, her hair a brown that just escapes brunette classification. She wears it in long bob fashion curled in back from ear to ear. It's promised an early return to long hair, for convenience sake, says Miss Sidney, while other girls are promising bobs for the same reason.

Garden Shows Spur Interest of Children

BY PAUL POTTER.

Of the many variations of expression of interest in flower gardening, the quickened stimulus to gardening on the part of boys and girls is to be commended. Junior gardens, whether the product of an individual family or of a community movement, amply repay those who encourage them during the summer vacation season.

Interest among children is always heightened by making a "game" of gardening. In the next step from such lively interest within a family or between the children of neighbors comes the desire to "put on a show."

This is the time to be preparing for such an event in your locality since September offers an abundance of bloom to assure the boys and girls of ample display material. It is important that those arranging the show personally visit the gardens of those who enter, to avoid any possibility that flowers may be sent in by youngsters whose parents are over anxious to win prizes.

There may be classes for annuals and for perennials of the season, such as zinnias, dahlias, marigolds, and gladioli. Other classes provide prizes for flower arrangement, best single specimen, or best six stems, and for the largest variety of flowers.

Another series of classes would provide for vegetables. Handicraft in the form of posters on gardening, conservation and bird life, as well as garden plans, may be rewarded.

Miniature model gardens, rockeries, bird houses, or aquariums might make interesting features.

Another form of junior competition is being developed by several communities in the Chicago region. This is the actual judging of junior gardens themselves, on the same plan as for adult competitions.

Vegetables Win Honored Place on Jelly Shelf

Beet, Carrot Marmalade Tempting Delicacies.

BY MARY MEADE.

Since the days when our colonial fore-mothers pushed up their voluminous sleeves and went out to stir tomato butters and pumpkin honeys in the open, down to this summer, when everybody seems to be trying to outdo everybody else in concocting things delicious and hunger tempting, vegetables have been competing with fruits for an equal place on the jam and jelly shelf.

And to look at the array of marmalades, preserves, conserves and butters which boast the vegetable plot as their home address, it would almost appear that our affections are slipping in the direction of carrots, beets, and like tasty possibilities as spreads and meat accompaniments. Not that vegetables are exclusive or puffed up by their new popularity. Frequently they may be found in combination with small amounts of fruit, as in the following delectable marmalade, which one almost has to keep under lock and key to insure against immediate disappearance.

RHUBARB AND PRUNE MARMALADE.

4 pounds bright colored rhubarb.
2 lemons, juice and grated rind.
1-3 cup orange juice.
5 pounds sugar.

Soak the prunes overnight in enough water to cover. Chop fine or put through a food grinder and mix with the uncooked, chopped rhubarb, fruit juices, and rind. Add the water in which the prunes were soaked and the sugar. Cook with frequent stirrings until thick and clear. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal at once with hot paraffin.

RHUBARB CONSERVE.

Here's another dress for the old pie plant faithful, simply delicious on hot biscuits for a frosty morning. Cut rhubarb into cubes to fill a quart measure. Add an equal amount of sugar and let stand eight hours. Add one cup of seedless raisins, one cup of finely chopped walnut meats, and the juice of three small oranges. Put the orange skins through a coarse food chopper and add to the conserve. Cook over a low flame about forty minutes or until thick.

CARROT MARMALADE.

2 oranges, grated rind and pulp.
2 lemons, grated rind and juice.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
½ teaspoon ginger.
6 cups sugar.

Mix the ingredients, except the pectin, and turn into a large kettle. Place over a hot flame and bring to a full boil, stirring constantly. Boil hard five minutes, remove from the fire, and stir in quickly the fruit pectin. Pour at once into sterile glasses and seal with hot paraffin.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—The secretary of war and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley returned today to their country place, Belmont farm, near Washington, from Ohio, where they went to attend the state Republican convention.

Invitations have been received here from Mr. and Mrs. John Armstead Welbourne of Leesburg, Va., for a reception Wednesday evening in their home there in honor of Secretary and Mrs. Hurley.

Invitations have been sent out also by Surgeon General and Mrs. Robert U. Patterson for dinner Friday night, July 22, at the Army and Navy Country club in honor of Secretary and Mrs. Hurley, after which the principal guests will receive the company at the army relief fête and ball.

Attorney General and Mrs. William D. Mitchell returned today to their Washington home from the cabinet camp on the grounds of the presidential camp on the Rapidan, where they spent the week-end.

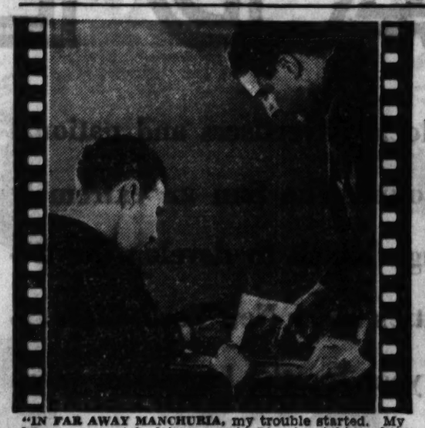
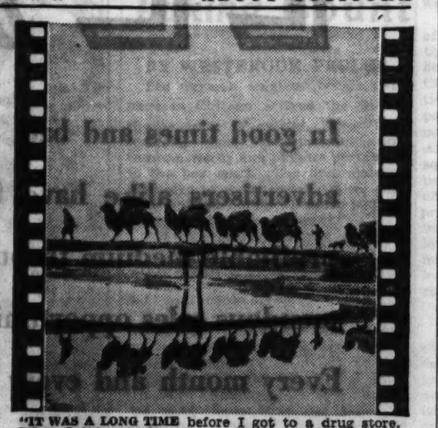
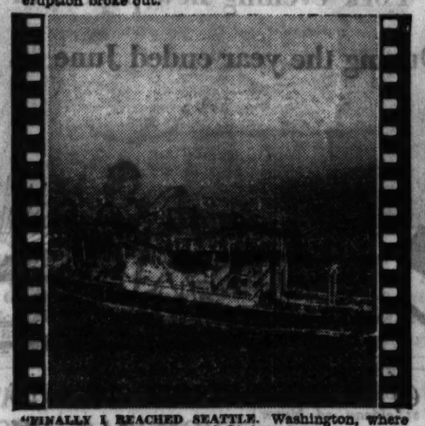
REAL-LIFE TALKIES ★★★★★ ABOUT CUTICURA



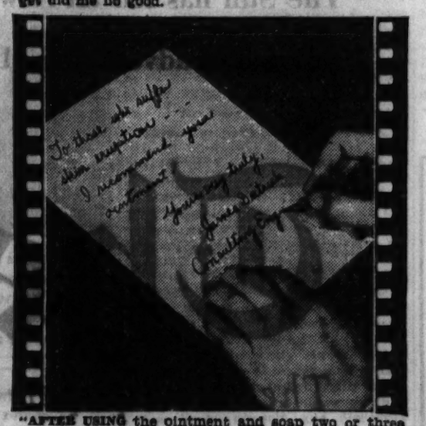
"IN FAR AWAY MANCHURIA, my trouble started. My legs were scratched in an accident. An itching skin eruption broke out.



"IT WAS A LONG TIME before I got to a drug store. When I did, remedies were lacking. The ones I could get did me no good.



"FINALLY I REACHED SEATTLE, Washington, where I found Cuticura Soap and Ointment.



"AFTER USING the ointment and soap two or three times daily, I obtained relief."

★ The actual letter signed by Mr. Deitrick, is quoted above.

Skin trouble, eczema and pimples especially, often disappear quickly and completely with the use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Grateful users by the thousands write and tell us of the relief they have obtained even after years of affliction.

75 YEARS of LEADERSHIP

In good times and bad, local advertisers and national advertisers alike have found The Sun an extremely profitable medium through which to develop the tremendous sales opportunities which New York offers... Every month and every year for the last seven years The Sun has led all New York evening newspapers in volume of advertising. During the year ended June 30, 1932, The Sun published 14,366,000 agate lines of advertising and led the second evening newspaper by 1,574,000 agate lines . . . More important than the volume of advertising in The Sun is the quality of the advertisements. The volume is maintained through the productiveness of The Sun's large, high-grade circulation; and the quality is maintained through a strict censorship of the advertising columns.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

It is sincerely hoped that the members of the Chicago Cubs ball team now have all the poison out of their systems after that terrible spectacle at Wrigley field yesterday afternoon. The score, 13 to 3 in favor of the New York Giants, really doesn't tell you how bad the Cubs were, though you ought to get some idea.

The horror of it all should be apparent when you realize that the Giants, so soft in the Sabbath double header, made eight runs in the eighth inning; that up to the ninth inning the Cubs had made three hits for a total of three bases, a batting showing for the team which personally was exceeded by each of three individual Giant players; that the Cubs made five errors, four of them on simple throwing maneuvers; that—but why prod your sensitive soul with all of this?

Lose No Ground.

There was one note of cheer in the whole bleak afternoon. The Cubs didn't lose ground in the pennant race, for the league leading Pittsburgh Pirates lost also. The fact that the Pirates lost with dignity and the Cubs didn't had no effect on the 2½ game span between the two contenders.

You've been told that the Giants made eight hits in that distressing eighth. And they had an even dozen before they busted loose in that eighth—a total of 20 hits against such clean living young men as Guy Bush, Bob Smith, and Jakie May. They made no hits off Burleigh Grimes in the ninth, however.

Vergez Most Obnoxious.

Johnny Vergez, who only recently got his bloomers off the Giant bench, led the New York attack with a triple, a double and two singles; Joe Moore knocked four singles in a row; Hughie Critz had three successive singles, and our fellow townsman, Freddy Lindstrom, had two doubles, both of which came at the most embarrassing times.

Up till Pitcher Herman Bell gave a friendship offering of three singles in the ninth inning the Cub slugging accomplishment consisted of a single by Cuyler in the first inning, a single by Stephenson in the fourth inning, and a single by Hartnett in the fifth. All were made after one was out.

The Cubs hopped off to a 1 to 0 lead in the first inning. After Herman had been thrown out by Critz, English was walked. Cuyler singled to center and English went to third, whence he scored on Stephenson's

HELLO, CHAMPIONS! GERMANS HERE FOR GOLDEN GLOVES BOUTS

Yes sir, it's ginger ale. Leonhard Mandlar, coach of the German boxing team, pours drink for Frederich Burger, president of the German Amateur Boxing association, last night as they rest in room at Ambassador hotel. Not like that Berlin beer, eh, Herr Burger? [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Yankees Whip White Sox, 6-4; Ruth Injured

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 18.—The pace making Yankees touched off one of their patented blasts today and that was all they needed to wreck the punch drunk White Sox. The blast, made up of two homers and some other items of less importance, blew four men across the plate in the second inning. Eventually the Yankees won, 6 to 4, but in the meantime they staggered into a bit of bad luck that is going to cost them the services of Babe Ruth for at least a month.

Ruth, who no longer moves around the outfield with the grace that once marked his work, went on a chase for a pop fly delivered by Pinch Hitter Selph in the seventh. He reached down trying to grab the ball with his gloved hand, turned quickly when it eluded him, and fell in a heap. They led him off the field like a broken down fire horse being led to the pension farm. Examination revealed he had ripped some tissue in his right thigh, an injury similar to one which a couple of seasons back kept him idle for a month.

Maybe They Won't Miss Him.

If what happened today as well as during the double header of yesterday was any indication, Ruth's absence isn't going to prove a disastrous blow to the Yanks' pennant hopes. The one time mighty slugger did practically nothing in the three battles. He was up four times this afternoon and needed only a pass. But some of his mates were a bit more ferocious. Lou Gehrig, for instance, turned loose his 22d homer, to start the decisive attack on Milt Gaston.

Tony Lazzeri also came up with a home run in the same inning. Late in the fight Joie Sewell contributed another. And there also were two stolen bases by Ben Chapman, who tops the league with a total of 23.

The only time during the argument that the Sox thought they had a chance to slip one over on their affluent rivals was in the second inning when they opened on George Pipgras and with the aid of an error sent two men to the plate. This merely incited the Yanks to put on their riot in the home half. After that Pipgras took the situation in hand and the Sox batting averages shrunk faster than an 89 cent shirt in its first washing. After the third the Yank righthander

HOWARD FREIGAU, EX-CUB, HURT IN POOL, DROWNS

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 18.—[Special.]—Howard Freigau, formerely an infielder for the Chicago Cubs, who has been playing with the Knoxville club of the Southern association, was drowned today while swimming in the Chattanooga Golf and Country club pool. Freigau was 28 years old.

Freigau played with two other major league teams, the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers. He also played with the Buffalo International league club and Toledo and Kansas City of the American association.

According to club officials Freigau dived off the high tower and his head struck the bottom of the pool. He drowned before aid could reach him. The tower is about 20 feet high.

JURGES SHELVED LONGER; REMOVE THIRD BULLET

Bill Jurges, Cub shortstop, will be lost to the club for another week at least. At the Illinois Masonic hospital, where Jurges was taken last night, an X-ray revealed that one of the bullets fired by Violet Popovich Valli, during an altercation in his room at the Carlos hotel on July 6, still was in his body.

It was removed by Dr. John H. Davis, club physician, who said Jurges would be unable to return to the lineup at Pittsburgh Friday, as had been expected before the bullet was discovered. Jurges was removed to the home of a friend immediately after leaving the hospital.

Dr. Davis said that apparently three bullets had struck Jurges, one passing through his right hand, another grazing his right side, and a third, the one discovered last night, lodging between the ninth and tenth ribs on the right side.

Ausgenockt in German? It's Taking Count

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

The German amateur boxers, who have in Chicago arrived the Golden Gloves team to gefight, have been teaching your correspondent some German words and phrases pertaining to the box sport. The first question prompted by a somewhat cynical curiosity naturally was, "How do you say 'I was robbed' in German?"

"'I vas rubbed; I vas rubbed?' Vas is dis 'I vas rubbed'?"

Our interpreter explained.

"O, O, yah-yah-yah. 'I vas rubbed.' So: 'Ich würde geraubt.'"

The next one, of course, was, "How do you say 'I broke my hand'?" and the answer was, "Ich habe meine hand gebrochen."

So now that the two fundamental phrases of pugilism, the squawk and the alibi, have been acquired, the lesson may proceed. The squawk and the alibi are less frequently resorted to in amateur fighting than in prize fighting, to be sure, and the management sincerely hopes and trusts that there will be no occasion for the use of either in connection with the Golden Gloves fights.

No Kick from French.

There was neither squawk nor alibi uttered when the French team inaugurated the annual international show in Chicago, but even so elegant a sportsman as Eddie [Society] Eagan, who boxed in three Olympics for the U. S. A. and knuckled his way around the world, could not refrain from remarking in his memoirs, "Fighting for Fun," that on certain unhappy occasions the decisions seemed inconsistent with the facts and that on others he was in no condition to do himself complete justice.

There is apparently something in the very nature of a game in which two men strive to inflict bodily harm which exaggerates the blows which a fellow lands himself and discounts those which he catches. So "I was robbed" and "I broke my hand" come easy to the tongue of the Eng-

THANK YOU.

The Tribune wishes to extend sincere thanks to the members of the reception committee, city officials, Dr. H. F. Simon, the German consul, and all others who cooperated in greeting the amateur boxing champions of Germany yesterday at Union station and at the city hall.

RECORD THRONG BLOCKS TRAFFIC NEAR STATION

Golden Gloves Foes Appear Powerful.

Guests of Rotary

THE German amateur boxing champions will be the guests of the Rotary club at noon today at the weekly luncheon of the club at the Sherman hotel. A special program has been arranged which will include short addresses by Frederich Burger, president of the German Amateur Boxing association, and leading sports officials of Chicago.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The amateur boxing champions of Germany are here. Chicago greeted them yesterday afternoon with unparalleled enthusiasm. Thousands jammed Union station until the vast rotunda was packed to capacity. Thousands more waited outside, blocking traffic on all surrounding streets.

Officials of the station said that the throng, which engulfed the reception committee, bands and singers, and nearly took over the ceremonies by their spontaneous desire to see the German boxers, was the largest ever to assemble at Union station.

Two Hours to Reach Hotel.

Handicapped by the crowds which followed the line of march to the city hall, the boxers were more than two hours reaching their headquarters at the Ambassador hotel in North State street.

Now a word about these boys who were the center of this tremendous reception. Smiling, waving their trim white navy caps in reply to the shouts of welcome, they endured without protest the shoving and pushing necessary to permit them to pass through the tightly drawn gantlet of spectators. Rugged, tanned by sun and sea wind, they gave an impression of strength. What they can do in the ring only can be told when they meet the eight champions of Chicagoland at Soldiers' field July 26.

The all embracing American word "cocky" well may be applied to these representatives of the Fatherland. The tumult of thousands didn't disturb them. Perhaps they accepted the cheers as their due, for they have not been defeated in international competition.

Plenty of Support for Germans.

Yesterday's throng was friendly. It was possessive. The crowd was German and it came to see its own. There will be as many at Soldiers' field a week from tonight cheering for the German team as for the Chicago Golden Glovers. There may be more, judged by yesterday's demonstration, for no visiting athletes or notables ever were welcomed as royally as were these boxers.

An hour before the Golden Arrow of the Pennsylvania railroad was due the crowd began to form. The members of the United Male Choruses of Chicago and officials of the reception committee were permitted to pass through the gates. A few minutes before 1 o'clock the Golden Arrow pulled in with the German squad in a special car attached to the rear of the train. As the boys piled off, accompanied by Frederich Burger, president of the German Amateur Boxing association, and Coach Leonhard Mandlar, the choruses sang the German song of welcome. They were led by Reinhold Walder and were in charge of Adolph Gill.

Officials Greet Team.

Clinnin, president of the Illinois Athletic commission and the National Boxing association; Avery Brundage and Capt. Roy Davis of the A. A. U.; Postmaster Arthur Lueder, and Dr. Herman N. BY FRENCH LANE.

Miss Bunting, a Chicago filly, came to the front at Arlington Park yesterday and captured the Lake Forest sweepstakes, one of the few stake victories Chicago horses have scored during the season.

The triumph pleased her owner, John Marsch, immensely. But a couple of minutes later Mr. Marsch went around behind the grandstand and kicked himself in the seat of the pants. When Miss Bunting dashed down the stretch to win the Lake Forest by three lengths, she showed her heels to some of the most formidable candidates for the $32,000 Lassie Stakes to be run at Arlington tomorrow. And the thing that made Mr. Marsch so angry at himself was that he had neglected to nominate Miss Bunting to run in the Lassie Stakes.

Miss Bunting was not highly regarded in the Lake Forest. She had shown plenty of speed in her last outing, but had run out at the head of the stretch. If there is anything that will make a hardened racegoer shy at a horse, it is one that wheels to the outside fence when the stretch run starts.

And Such a Stylish Field.

So Miss Bunting was sadly neglected. When she dashed into a lead of a couple of lengths soon after the start came, the spectators rubbed their eyes and wondered who the speed demon might be. They had failed to recognize the cardinal and green Marsch racing jacket and they didn't think Miss Bunting could take such a lead from so stylish a field.

As far as Miss Bunting was concerned the race was won then and there. She went right along about the business of pacemaking and wound up by beating C. V. Whitney's Capsheaf by three lengths. Royal Blunder, on which there had been one of the heaviest post time plunges of the season, was going well near the end but could not finish better than third.

Miss Bunting, ridden by T. P. Martin, stepped the 5½ furlongs in 1:05. She was going so well at the end that she indicated the six furlongs of the Lassie would not be too much for her. She paid $19.56 to win, $8.24 to place, and $3.90 to show. Capsheaf was at $5.63 to place and $3.80 to show. Royal Blunder's show price was $3.30.

Roman Holiday Destroyed.

The race brought a tragic end to Roman Holiday, a son of Apprehension-Regal Roman, owned by Mrs. John Hay Whitney. Shortly after he passed the finish line in sixth place he crossed his legs and went down. In the fall his left front leg was broken and he had to be destroyed before he could be removed from the track.

Epithet, a great horse as a 2 year old, not much as a 3 year old, but improving with every race this season, galloped to another brilliant victory in the Des Plaines purse at a mile.

Jockey Landolt rushed him out into the lead at the start and he made all the pace to run his mile in 1:36. Fall Apple, a 3 year old was moving up with a determined challenge near the end, but fell a length short of catching the flying Epithet. The latter was heavily backed and the favorite at slightly more than even money. Crystal Prince was also coming fast near the end, but was not even threatening the two leaders.

Jockey Coucci, who won the Classic on Gusto, gave the crowd a fine start when he won on the favorite, Poppyman, in the first race. He also booted Pancho Lopez home in the third. But for the rest of the afternoon those who backed him had to search for fresh money.

Load 134 Lbs. on Equipoise for Handicap

Equipoise was handed a crusher of 134 pounds for the $20,000 added Arlington Handicap, to be run on Saturday. It is the most weight the Whitney champion has ever been asked to pack. However, he will not dodge the issue, Trainer Fred Hopkins indicated last night.

Gusto, the Classic winner, gets into the Handicap with 116 pounds. Stepenfetchit was assigned 108 and Top Flight 109. The two older horses, which are expected to give Equipoise the toughest battle, are Clock Tower and White Clover II., both easterners. The former was assigned 119 pounds and the latter 117, the same as the impost handed Mate. Plucky Play is asked to carry only 111 and Pittsburgher 107.

The Ravinia claiming stakes, with a gross value of $3,720, will be the topliner on the Dollar day program at Arlington this afternoon. Over night it attracted eight good routers, including Swift and True, Lady Broadcast, William T., Prose and Poetry, and Barcelona Pete. The race is at a mile and three furlongs, one of the longest of the season at Arlington.

The Regret purse, at seven furlongs, also has a high spot on today's program. Named for the only filly that ever won a Kentucky Derby, it attracted several of the best fillies and mares in America, including Con Amore, Canfil, Sweet Scent, French Duchess, I Say, and Seven Veils. The admission price for today's program was reduced to $1 to create more Chicago interest in the sport of kings.

Many of the visitors for the Classic remained over for yesterday's racing at Arlington, and the result was the largest Monday crowd of the season. There were about 10,000 in attendance.

Fast workouts were turned in at Arlington Park yesterday morning by candidates for the Lassie Stakes, the $30,000 feature for juvenile fillies that will headline tomorrow's program.

The Wheatley stable's Edelweiss, one of the favorites for the Lassie, impressed the railbirds when she went five furlongs in 1:00 2-5. Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Screech also had the work watches gasping as she galloped a quarter in :22 2-5, three-eighths in :33 4-5, and the half in :46 3-5, easing up the three-quarters in 1:13 2-5. Darkling and Daisy Cutter, two of the C. V. Whitney eligibles, were asked for an easy trial at six furlongs, which they completed in 1:17 1-5.

Early Bird May Find Worm, but Cowbird Eats It

BY BOB BECKER.

If during a cross country hike around Chicago you should see a small bird feeding a young, dark colored bird much larger than the hard working parent, what is the answer to this apparent paradox? Bird fans who are familiar with some of the more common summer birds in Chicagoland will not need more than one chance to solve this ornithological puzzle. Although lacking definite color descriptions of either bird, it is a safe guess that it's just another case of some poor nesting bird being duped by a cowbird.

L. E. Nafty of Chicago presents this bird situation in the following letter:

"Yesterday I was amazed to see an unusually small species of wild canary on the ground feeding a bird at least three times as large as the canary. Upon closer approach it flew clumsily into a tree, to which the small canary constantly returned with food. The 'baby' bird was dark in color and looked something like the description you once gave of a starling."

Without a description of this so-called wild canary, of which there are none native to this country, and knowing that the yellow warbler's nest often is visited by femals cowbirds which drop their eggs in the little warbler's home, we'll hazard a guess that this canary observed by Mr. Nafty was a yellow warbler. This species, along with the goldfinch, commonly is called a wild canary by many persons.

The dark colored young bird probably was a baby cowbird. The parasitic habit of the cowbird in laying its eggs in the nests of other birds is one of the most interesting bird studies in Chicagoland. Apparently in the ugly cowbird the instinct of motherhood has been lost. The female bird sneaks through the underbrush in order to find the nest of another bird so that she can shift to that nesting bird the duties of raising the cowbird's young.

Sometimes we find birds intelligent enough to fool the cowbird but not often. Therefore you see warblers and vireos working double shifts to get food for two little cowbirds while their own young are shoved out of the picture. This is due to the fact that the bird's instinct inspires it to incubate any egg or feed any young which it finds in its nest. Undoubtedly Mr. Nafty was looking at a young cowbird being raised by a foster parent.

MACKS CAPTURE 2D PLACE; BEAT BROWNS, 8 TO 1

Freitas Executes Double Play Without Throwing.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 18.—(AP)—In winning their third straight by taking the opening game of the series with St. Louis today the Athletics also administered the eighth straight defeat suffered by the Browns. The score was 8 to 1, lifting the Mackmen back into second place.

Tony Freitas was credited with the victory, his sixth in succession. He made an unusual unassisted double play in the fifth inning. Fielding Schulte's grounder Freitas ran over to the third base line, trapping Levey, and touching him out. Then he ran toward Pitcher Blaeholder, who was off second. Bluffing a throw, Freitas kept running toward Blaeholder and tagged him out. He tripped over Blaeholder's foot and received a gash in his right ankle that put him out of the game.

Cochrane accounted for the last three runs by hitting his 13th home run of the year with two on base. Score:

TIGERS TAKE TWO.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers defeated the Senators twice today, 8 to 6, and 2 to 1, breaking a Washington winning streak which had been stretched to nine games.

In the nightcap, Webb, who doubled and went to third on West's fumbles, scored in the second inning behind Walker's single. Another run came in the fifth inning when Hayworth got on base on Myer's error, was sacrificed by Bridges, and came home on Davis' double.

The lone Washington score came in the sixth. West was safe on Bridges' error, advanced on a pass and a sacrifice and scored when Gehringer threw out Crowder. Scores:

DODGERS, 7; ST. LOUIS, 4.

St. Louis, Mo., July 18.—(AP)—Timely hitting by Hack Wilson and Glenn Wright gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 7 to 4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Wilson came through with a double in the seventh, scoring two runs when the Cards were trying to protect a one run lead obtained when they scored three runs off Van Mungo in the sixth. Wright sewed up the game in eighth, hammering out a home run on the heels of Cuccinello's single.

Giants Bury Cubs with 8 Runs in 8th

long fly to Lindstrom. Hornsby forced Cuyler. After that the Cubs virtually retired from the entertainment.

Terry opened the Giant second with a line single to center, but immediately saw the effort blotted out when Lindstrom hit into a double play.

English Throws to Dugout.

The Giants' third inning also opened with a single to center—this one propelled by Marshall, Bell popped to English. A double play seemed in the making when Joe Moore sent a grounder toward English, but just as Woody was to seize the ball it took an ornery hop over his head, thus enabling Marshall to reach third and Moore first. Critz forced Moore, Herman to English, but English threw the ball into the dugout in an effort to complete a double play, Critz taking second. Ott beat out a dinky one toward Bush, Critz going to third, and when Bush hit Ott in the back with a belated throw toward first, Critz continued home. Terry singled to right, Ott taking third, but the inning ended with Lindstrom's fly to Cuyler.

Bush fell short of wading out of a big jam in the fifth. Moore beat out a bunt to Hornsby and went to second when Critz also beat out a bunt to Hornsby. Ott walked, filling the bases. Terry hit into a double play, Grimm to Hartnett to Grimm, Critz taking third and Ott second. Lindstrom then spoiled Bush's Houdini act by doubling to left, scoring Critz and Ott. Bush threw out Hogan.

Smith Pitches Triple.

Smith took over the pitching chore at the outset of the sixth. Bob's first act was to pitch a triple ball to Vergez. Vergez stayed on third while English threw out Marshall and Bell fanned, but came home when Moore singled to left. Moore was out trying to steal second.

The New Yorkers went crazy in the eighth, as you've been told. Hogan singled to left and stopped at third on Vergez's third hit, a double to left. Marshall singled to center, scoring Hogan and Vergez. Bell forced Marshall. Moore, Critz, and Ott registered successive singles, causing May to relieve Smith with the bases full. Two runs came home on Hornsby's first error of the inning. Then there was a double by Lindstrom, a long fly by Hogan, Vergez's fourth hit, and another error by Hornsby. The net of all these terrible things was eight runs and eight hits.

The Cubs were permitted to make two runs in the ninth just as a gesture of friendliness on Bell's part.

In the Wake of the News

HOME THOUGHTS.

LAKE WAWASEE, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—It was 7 o'clock in the evening. Chicagoland boxers in training to meet Germany's amateur champions at Soldiers' field July 26 were sitting around in front of the hotel after dinner watching speed boats dash up and down the pretty lake and talking over the day's happenings.

Those activities had included light morning roadwork, horseback riding, golf, swimming, the training workout in the garage ring, three bountiful meals from which the liquids and fats had not yet been cut to the irreducible minimum for the final days of drying out, and training preparation with enough amusement to keep the work from becoming a monotonous grind. It was such a life as strong, healthy young fellows would regard as a vacation except for its serious purpose. Therefore the chatter was gay and light in tenor.

As The Wake approached the group we noticed one well bronzed chap was sitting a little apart. It was Frankie May, candidate for a position as featherweight representative.

"What's the matter, Frankie, tired?" we asked.

"Oh, no, I was just thinking of my two year old baby sister," he replied. "It's wonderful here, but she's what I miss most. I always play with her every evening before she goes to bed when I am home."

Frankie, who lives on Chicago's south side, is 19 years old, oldest of a family of five brothers and the baby sister. His family is German, although they came to this country many years ago from Austria. He attended St. George's school through the grammar grades and entered Tilden High, but confesses he did not care much for school and went to work.

Father May is a steamfitter and Frankie acted as helper on jobs, although work of this nature has been irregular for the last two years. For a time he held an office position with a plumbing supply house. That position, too, went by the boards with a reduction in personnel due to the depression. That's why Frankie is thinking of turning pro.

"It's pretty hard to get along in these times with people willing to work and unable to get it. I feel I ought to help out the family if possible. If I should make the team and do well against Germany I'd fight for money. I like boxing anyway. I don't know whether I'd stay in the game or not, but I'd fight as long as there was any money in it, for the present at least, but I'd certainly like to have a regular job."

"Play any other sports?" we asked.

"Football," he said. "I was quarter back on the Aero-Flites, a prairie eleven most of whose players live around 72d and Vincennes. We lost only one game all last season," he added proudly.

"How much do they weigh?"

"About 150 pounds."

"But aren't you too light?" we protested. May weighs 128 pounds.

"Oh, I played quarter back. We thought we had a Minnesota shift without calling signals and it was hard for me to learn, but I finally got it. I hurt a knee once, but that was the only time I ever was injured."

"Ever hurt in the ring?" we asked. "Oh, I've been hit hard when it hurt some," he replied, "but never really hurt. I've never been knocked out or even knocked off my feet," and he went through the familiar motion of knocking wood.

Clean boxing is the code taught these Golden Glovers. We asked, "Ever meet any unfair boxers?"

"Only once," Frankie replied. "One fellow who was an ex-pro got on an amateur card by mistake and he tried to give me the works. He would bump his head against me in the clinches, trying to hit my cheek or cut my eye. He would also rough his glove across my face and upward on my nose, and use his elbows against my body. Suppose I'll have to learn it, too, but I'll never fight that way unless the other fellow starts it first. That's not boxing."

Do you wonder, readers, that a camp follower becomes interested in these boys and their ambitions?

German Boys Get a Welcome That Is a Welcome; Awed

BY HEINZ REICHMANN.

[Berlin Sports Writer in Chicago to Cover the International Golden Gloves Bouts.]

"How great it must be to be famous and honored as we were upon our arrival in Chicago. We know now how such noted Americans as Col. Charles Lindbergh, Babe Ruth and the others we have heard so much of in our country feel when they are feted in the manner that we were."

Those were the first words of Erich Campe, the 19 year old police cadet who won the German welterweight championship, and spokesman for the squad.

"Yes, it certainly is great," he said as he rested in his room at the Ambassador hotel shortly after the reception of the German amateur boxing team yesterday.

Coach Leonhard Mandlar ordered the boxers to bed shortly after their arrival at the hotel, but I found most of the boys in their bathtubs.

"They can remove our beds, but the bathtubs must remain," most of them said. "What heat! A kingdom for a glass of beer!"

Amazed by Throng.

If I were to write the boys' impressions of Chicago it would require columns. They had imagined, they told me, that a small delegation would greet them at the station, deliver a short speech, take them to a small tourist hotel, and would not pay much attention to them until they crawled into the Soldiers' field ring on July 26.

But instead they found practically half the city at their feet. German songs made them feel at home and the masses in the streets as the parade moved down Jackson boulevard cheered them enthusiastically.

The welcome will live long in their memories. What stories they will tell their grandchildren in years to come! The music of the bands outside the station, the parade of the German war veterans and the American Legion post, and the official welcome by City of Chicago notables at the city hall.

Kartz Most Excited.

The most excited and thrilled boxer of the group was Franz Kartz, who battled his way to the German lightweight title. Franz stood on the stairs leading to the street level at the Union station and seemed to want to address his countrymen. A future Hitler, this Kartz.

In the afternoon, while his seven teammates were resting at the hotel, Kartz nervously flitted from room to room. He made many visits to the room of Frederich Burger, president of the German Amateur Boxing association.

"How exciting it is in Chicago, Herr Burger," said Kartz on one of his visits. "Where can I purchase one of those loud blowing sirens the policemen used this afternoon in clearing the traffic on the streets, Herr Burger? You told us to learn English, but the whole city talks German."

If Papa Burger had not taken Kartz to his room and locked him up he still would be jumping around the hotel, going from room to room and asking questions.

Happy Birthday, Hans.

Hans Bernloehr, the middleweight champion, was celebrating his 25th birthday yesterday. As a surprise several teammates put a large wet sponge under the sheets in his bed, which became a pool of water when he lay down. Bernloehr discovered the sponge and a note which read: "Happy birthday greetings."

Campe spent most of his time talking to Motorcycle Policemen Ben Weick and Pat Cochran, who accompanied the team to the hotel. Campe asked if they were the policemen who arrested Al Capone and how many gangsters there are in the city of Chicago. The caps worn by Chicago policemen are much lighter than those of Berlin policemen, Campe found.

Heinrich Kohlhaas, the heavyweight with a baby face, wore a sad expression on his face. He lost five pounds in making the 4,000 mile trip. However, his comrades refused to believe him, for he heartily enjoys his meals. They refuse to dine at the same table, as he takes portions of their food.

Boys Retire Early.

The boys retired early and today they will begin training for their bouts with the Americans. They will start the first drill at the Germania club at 3 o'clock. No spectators will be admitted.

"We will win all eight bouts and will not disappoint the thousands of Chicagoans who gave us that splendid reception," said Coach Mandlar. "The boys must train hard to get into their best condition—and they will."

Warneke to Try for No. 14; Opposed by Fitzsimmons

In the fourth game of the Cub-Giants series this afternoon Lon Warneke will seek to win his No. 14 victory. He will be opposed by that sprightly Mishawaka round man, Freddy Fitzsimmons.

Manager Rogers Hornsby got a single in the ninth inning yesterday, his first safety in a dozen times at bat. Both of his errors came in the eighth.

Guy Bush came far from hanging up victory No. 11, but he has a swell item on which to second guess himself. If Moore's double play ball hadn't taken a crazy bounce for a devastating single in the third inning New York would not have scored its two runs in that frame to take a 2 to 1 lead and the confidence of Bush and the team would not have been upset. You know how they figure those things out.

The season series now stands five wins for the Cubs and three for the Giants.

Record Crowd at Station to Greet Germans

commission, extended personal greetings.

By this time several hundred of the crowd had forced an entrance to the train shed at a remote gate. They ran across the intervening tracks to the train. Then they jammed around the singers and boxers until it was with utmost difficulty that the photographers obtained pictures.

Need Police Escort.

Escorted by police, the boys finally were brought to the gates leading into the station. Here the press of the crowd almost prevented them from passing. Others of the reception committee were waiting.

In this group were Judge Oscar Hebel, Judge Joseph Graber, Ald. Sheldon Govier, chairman of the World's Fair, athletics, and convention committees of the city council; Frank Lang, secretary of the reception committee; Arthur Seyferlich, Louis Gertenrich, John Gutknecht, Al Weinberger, Frank A. Neff, William Jacobs, Henry W. Olschner, Oscar Mayer and John Weisbach.

Greetings from Consul.

The German consul, Dr. H. F. Simon, and other representatives of his office were among the first to meet the German boxers and welcome them to Chicago.

Once inside the station, the crowd closed in on the small space which had been kept clear. All, apparently, wished to speak to the Germans, to shake their hands. Only the efficient work of Capt. John Stege and Sergt. Thomas Maloney who were in charge of the police detail from the Des Plaines street station, and Joseph Prendergast, chief of the station police, kept the thousands from sweeping the visitors off their feet.

The roar of cheers blanketed the strident, martial strains of the musicians from the Board of Trade American legion post, and even the shrilling bagpipes of the kiltie band scarcely could be heard.

Finally Reach Automobiles.

A pathway was forced up the stairs leading to the plaza where cars waited. The boys finally were escorted to the automobiles, and behind the white car of Greeter Gaw and a motorcycle escort circled in Adams street to Canal, where the bands were forming. Flanked by hundreds of marchers the parade moved east in Jackson boulevard and then north in La Salle street to the city hall. As the German boys, perched high on the backs of their open cars, moved through the financial district, a whirlwind of ticker tape and bits of paper floated down. The loop celebrated as only the loop can celebrate.

At the city hall, once again the police were forced to push back crowds which extended from curb to curb. The boys then were taken to the office of Mayor Cermak. In the absence of the mayor because of illness, Ernest J. Kruetgen, a member of the board of local improvements, welcomed the boxers.

Wonderful Reception—Burger.

His address was in German. The reply was delivered by Mr. Burger. He said:

"In behalf of the German Amateur Boxing association I want to extend to you my sincere thanks for this wonderful reception you have given us. The trip to the United States is the biggest event in our lives. Especially are the boys of the boxing team, who have not had sea experience since the war, enthused about this great trip.

"We regret that it is not possible for us to stay longer in this great country, but we are very happy to stay in Chicago for a week where we will have opportunity to become acquainted with the American people.

"Again let me thank you for this enthusiastic reception and I assure you that we will take back home with us pleasant memories which we will recall to our brothers and sisters in Germany."

GIANTS BEAT MONROE.

Cole's American Giants clinched the five game series with the Monroe Monarchs from Louisiana yesterday, winning the fourth game, 4 to 1. The final game will be played this afternoon.

TELLS OF SUIT TO REGAIN BONDS KREUGER PLEDGED

Lawyer Reports on Fight for $50,000,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 18.—Another echo of the Kreuger failure was heard today. James N. Rosenberg of counsel for the Irving Trust company, trustee in bankruptcy for the defunct International Match corporation, formally reported to Oscar W. Ehrhorn, federal referee in bankruptcy, on efforts made by the trustee to recover $50,000,000 in German bonds and $1,500,000 in coupon money which, it is asserted, belong to the International Match company assets.

U. S., Swedish Banks Sued.

Suit is being brought against various defendants, including five Swedish banks, the Chase National bank, and Lee Higginson & Co., Mr. Rosenberg reported. The Chase National bank is being sued only for the coupon money it has on deposit.

Lee Higginson & Co. is named in the suit as fiscal agent of the German government and as having collected the money for paying coupon holders and deposited the cash in the Chase bank.

Argument on a motion enjoining the bank from paying the money to any other than the Irving Trust company will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. before Federal Judge Julian W. Mack. Mr. Rosenberg, stating that the Irving Trust company would do everything lawful and proper to protect the rights of American investors, emphasized that the litigation was in no sense directed at the German government.

Bonds Pledged by Kreuger.

The $50,000,000 in German bonds, claimed by the trust company, were given as collateral on a personal loan to Ivar Kreuger by the Deutsche Union bank and without consultation with any officers or directors of International Match. It was further stated by George K. Hourwich, also of counsel to the Irving Trust company, that the managing director of Scandaniviska bank, who was also a director of the International Match corporation, had signed an annual report of the match corporation which admitted that the bonds belonged to International Match.

A further hearing on the questions involved in the custody of bonds and coupon money will be held next Friday at 2 p. m. in the offices of Referee Ehrhorn.

CHICAGO STOCK LIST DECLINES; TRADE IS DULL

Stocks on the Chicago exchange eased lower yesterday in listless trading. Commonwealth Edison after touching 57½ at the opening reacted to close at 55⅝—off 1¼ from Saturday's finish. Public Service issues maintained their previous closing prices. Central Public Service preferred shared in the general higher tendency in preferred stocks to pick up 2 points in closing at 30.

Great Lakes Dock and Dredge was among the few stocks to move against the trend by gaining a fraction to close at 6½ on limited sales. Quaker Oats preferred was up 1½ at 97½. Among the automotive issues Bendix Aviation slipped ⅛ in finishing at 6 while Borg Warner was up a minor fraction.

Swift International, which has been the subject of differences between the Chicago stock exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade, advanced ⅜ to close at 19⅞ on the exchange. Trading in this stock was started on the Board of Trade's security market yesterday. Officials of the exchange stated that the matter is at a status quo and declined to comment on any action that might arise.

Russian Crops Need Rain, Report to Chicago Pits

Russian weather conditions for the week ended Saturday were dry in eastern and northern central districts, including the Ukraine and Black sea regions, and to the south light showers. The upper Volga region continues to be dry, while the lower Volga valley is mostly dry. Temperatures for the week were moderate. Forecast for central districts light rain and cool, but elsewhere warmer and dry.

B. W. Snow of Bartlett Frazier says this is the seventh week in succession reporting continued dry weather in the upper Volga territory, which involves some 10,000,000 acres, as well as continued lack of moisture for a considerable period in the lower Volga valley with another 10,000,000 acres.

This continued lack of rainfall in the heaviest wheat producing section of Russia warrants apprehension as to yield possibilities, as the margin of rainfall safety in the Volga territory is narrow, even under normal conditions.

BANKS TO OFFER $70,000,000 OF UTILITY ISSUES

Peoples Gas, Edison Are Included.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Plans for the $70,000,000 of financing for the three Insull operating companies in the Chicago area—Commonwealth Edison, Peoples Gas, and Public Service Company of Northern Illinois—have been completed, according to well substantiated reports in La Salle street yesterday.

A meeting of representatives of the three utility companies and the underwriters was held last evening, but no announcement was made. It was understood that there were one or two legal points to be taken care of before the issues would be ready to be presented to the public and that an official announcement might be made some time today.

From authoritative sources it was learned that the combined offering had been underwritten by a strong syndicate of Chicago and New York banks after a series of conferences in those cities.

This $70,000,000 is to meet maturities at the close of this month. Commonwealth Edison has $20,000,000 of 3½ per cent notes maturing July 30; Peoples Gas has a $15,000,000 issue of 3½ per cent notes due the same day, and Public Service Company of Northern Illinois has $15,000,000 of 4 per cent notes maturing July 30 and $10,000,000 of 5 per cent debentures falling due Aug. 1.

Members of Syndicate.

The syndicate, according to reports from reliable sources, is to include the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, First Union Trust and Savings bank, Harris Trust and Savings bank, Northern Trust company, and Field, Glore & Co. of Chicago, and Chase National bank, National City bank, Guaranty Trust company, and Bankers' Trust company of New York.

The Continental Illinois, First Union and Harris Trust, it was reported, are to head the offering syndicate, with the other banks participating.

It is understood that the Chicago and New York banks have reached an agreement whereby the companies are assured of the necessary funds at the time they are needed, but that the public offerings of securities will not occur all at the same time but will be spaced sufficiently far apart to enable the market readily to absorb them.

The Commonwealth Edison issue, it was said, would be put out some time next week, followed a week or so later by the Peoples Gas issue, with the Public Service offering some time later.

Earnings Hold Well.

Three things favor the issuance of securities of these three big operating utilities at this time. In the first place, the earnings of all three have held up well, despite the depression and the failure of the less soundly financed Insull holding and investment companies. Second, the syndicate making the offering represents the greatest strength in the securities field in both Chicago and New York. And, third, the bond market is in much better shape to absorb these offerings than it was a month or even a week or two ago.

There were three big issues: Thirty million dollars Consolidated Gas Company of New York 5 per cent debentures, $25,000,000 Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston 5 per cent notes, and $18,000,000 Brooklyn Union Gas company 6½ per cent mortgage bonds. All of them were reported to have sold readily.

Among Leading Utilities.

The three former Insull operating companies in the Chicago area—Commonwealth Edison, Peoples Gas, and Public Service Company of Northern Illinois—are among the nation's prime utilities.

James Simpson, who succeeded Samuel Insull as chairman of the board of the three concerns, in a statement on June 24 announced that Commonwealth Edison company earnings for the year ended March 31 were equal, after fixed charges, to $9.75 per share on the capital stock.

Peoples Gas earnings were placed at $9.40 per share and Public Service earnings were $8.18 per share on the common.

"Net results since April 1 to date," Mr. Simpson said at that time, "justify the expression of hope that earnings for the current year in all three companies will compare favorably with last year."

Consolidated Retail Stores Sales Decline in June

Consolidated Retail Stores, Inc., report sales for the month of June of $1,056,055, as compared with $1,458,094 for the corresponding month in 1931. This is a decrease of $402,039, or 27.6 per cent. Sales for the first six months of 1932 totaled $7,516,432, as compared with $9,955,426 for the corresponding period last year.

Data on Banks Show Course of Depression

BY SCRUTATOR.

There is evidence that the epidemic of bank failures that has swept over the country in the last two years is waning. Moreover, the percentage of closed banks being reopened is increasing. Also, the ratio of deposits of reopened banks to those of closed banks is improving. Taken together, these factors mean that less money of depositors is being tied up.

Improvement in the banking situation appears due to several causes. The weaker banks either have passed out of existence or have been reorganized into solvent institutions. This has been effected both by their own efforts and by federal aid, either directly through the Reconstruction Finance corporation or indirectly through the federal reserve system. The government corporation since February has loaned $642,789,313 to 3,600 banks and trust companies on "frozen assets," while the reserve banks have sustained the market by heavy buying of government bonds, which has enabled hard pressed banks to sell such securities without undue loss.

Federal Reserve Figures.

Bank failures during the first five months of this year numbered 660 and their total deposits were $367,549,000, according to the federal reserve bulletin for June. However, 142 banks were reopened with aggregate deposits of $85,052,000. January was the black month, with 342 failures involving $219,071,000 deposits. Only 19 banks reopened, with deposits of $10,952,000. The Reconstruction Finance corporation was organized in February and failures dropped to 124, with deposits of $65,479,000, while 46 banks reopened, with deposits of $19,601,000. Only 46 banks closed in March, with deposits of $14,991,000, but 38 banks reopened, with $19,590,000 deposits.

In April failures rose to 71, with deposits of $31,924,000, and reopenings numbered 22, with deposits of $11,041,000. In May there were 77 failures, with deposits of $36,084,000, and 17 reopenings, with deposits of $23,808,000. Thus, banks reopening in May had deposits about two-thirds as large as those suspending, whereas banks reopening in January held deposits amounting to about one-twentieth of those in banks closing.

Sharp Rise in 1930.

The record of bank failures for previous years reveals that the wave of closings started in 1930, when the depression began to have its effect. From 1921 to 1929 the number of failures ranged between 491 and 956, with low point in 1928 and the high mark in 1926. But in 1930 bank failures rose to 1,345, with deposits of $864,715,000, and in 1931 the number jumped to 2,298, with deposits totaling $1,691,510,000. October, 1931, set a high record with 522 failures.

On the basis of the first five months of this year and considering the recent trend, bank failures this year should number less than half those of 1931, and reopenings should make a better showing. Therefore, less money of depositors should be tied up.

There has been much criticism on the failure of banks that were members of the federal reserve system. Many people have assumed mistakenly that such banks are under extra government supervision and control. On the contrary, there is no extra supervision over the national banks, which are required to join the reserve system, and there is no supervision over the state banks, which may join the system at their own option.

Members' Record Better.

However, the record of the member banks of the federal reserve system has been better than that of the nonmember banks. Of the 1,345 banks that failed in 1930, only 187 were members of the reserve system, and of the 2,298 failures in 1931, only 517 were members. Of the 660 banks that closed during the first five months of this year only 157 were members of the reserve system.

Even considering the greater number of nonmember banks, the insolvency record of the member banks is better. On Dec. 31, 1931, there were 19,968 banks in the United States, of which 7,246 were members of the federal reserve system and 12,722 were nonmembers. Thus, more than a third of the country's banks belonged to the system, but they have accounted for less than one-quarter of the total bank failures in 1931 and thus far this year, while in 1930 they accounted for only one-seventh of the total number of failures.

PLANTS REOPEN IN EAST, WEST; SOME IN SOUTH

Progress in Shoes, Steel, Rubber.

Reports from expanding industry from several sections of the United States yesterday proved a cheerful note.

From Youngstown, O., came the report that the Republic Steel corporation had begun the new week's operations at a higher rate than anticipated, with one-third of its open hearth furnaces at the Lansingville works melting whereas only three were to be on the week's tentative schedule.

Another of the more optimistic reports was from Salt Lake City. There officials of the Utah Copper company announced that the major copper camps of the state, the Bingham mine and the Garfield smelter opened yesterday. About 1,500 men return to work after a month of idleness. Duration of the operations, officials stated, will be subject to the prices of the metal.

Gains in New England.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., July 18.—Eighteen new industrial plants were established in cities and towns of the state, exclusive of Boston, during June, according to announcement today by the Massachusetts industrial commission.

Meanwhile plants of the Nashua Manufacturing company at Lowell and Nashua, N. H., which employ about 2,000 persons, reopened today following a shutdown July 1. Irregular schedules will be maintained for the present, it being the policy of the management to operate solely on orders. Business in blankets is reported to be improved and the general feeling in the market is declared to be decidedly better.

Shoe Industry Improves.

Most of the work reported by the industrial commission was in the shoe manufacturing and allied industries, in which 760 persons were given employment, according to reports received by the commission from the various chambers of commerce and boards of trade in Massachusetts in response to a monthly questionnaire. Other products, in the manufacture of which additional workers will be employed, include advertising specialties, upholstering, hand soap, metal products, awnings, commercial printing, corrugated paper boxes, knitted piece goods, medicine, recreational equipment, jewelry, confectionery, metal plating, floor coverings, and manufactured ice. A list of the larger industries follows:

Lynn—Reliance Shoe company to employ 350 persons in the manufacture of women's shoes.

The Fenway Shoe company, to manufacture women's shoes, using an adhesive process. One hundred and fifty persons will be employed.

Brenton Shoe company, manufacturing women's shoes. To employ twenty-five persons.

East Hampton—Advertising Corporation of America, to employ from 65 to 150 persons in the manufacture of advertising specialties.

Fall River—J. & J. Corrugated Box company, to employ thirty persons in the manufacture of corrugated paper boxes.

Framingham—The Saxon mills, to manufacture knitted piece goods. Twenty persons will be employed.

Trouser Factory Reopens.

Springfield, Mo., July 18.—(AP)—Five hundred employés of the Oberman Manufacturing company's trouser factory here will return to work Thursday morning after a six weeks' layoff, it was announced today by Jake Kranzberg, paint manager.

More Work at Reading.

Reading, Pa., July 18.—(AP)—One hundred and seventy men went back to work at the finishing mills of the Oley street and Carcola iron plants of the Reading Iron company today, officials of the company announced. All are old employés, no new hands being required.

Alabama Mills Reopen.

Gadsden, Ala., July 18.—(AP)—Smoke spiraled from chimneys of the Gulf States Steel company today bringing tidings of renewed activity in the industry. The blooming, rod, wire, and nail mills resumed production today and a bar mill and two blast furnaces placed in operation last week continued on a curtailed schedule.

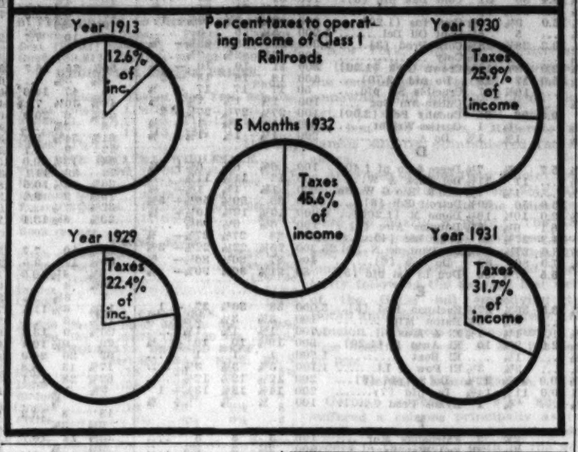
Rubber Factories Busy.

Hartford, Conn., July 18.—(AP)—State department of labor reported that rubber factories in Naugatuck were operating double shifts, with largest pay rolls in three years.

Steel Outlook Better.

Youngstown, O., July 18.—There is rumor in the steel industry that conditions are on the upgrade.

Taxes Are Taking Nearly Half of Railroad Income This Year



GAS COMPANY'S INCOME HOLDS UP DESPITE SLUMP

Second Quarter Net Is $1,682,432.

Despite the general reduction in business activities, earnings of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company are holding up well. This was disclosed yesterday in a report on the second quarter results of the company's operations.

Net income for the quarter ended June 30 was $1,682,432 after charges for taxes, interest and provision for retirements. This was equal to $2.35 a share on the 714,795 shares outstanding and is $1.10 per share more than dividend requirements at the existing $5 annual rate established at the last meeting of the board of directors.

In the June 30 quarter of 1931 Peoples Gas reported a net income of $1,805,904, or $2.70 a share on a slightly smaller number of shares then outstanding.

Shows Small Drop.

The company earned $1,692,802 or $2.37 a share in the first quarter of this year, while the net income for the March quarter of 1931 was $1,772,339 or $2.66 per share.

In its report of yesterday the company reported $8,606,178 from gas sales and $130,047 other operating revenues, giving combined gross earnings of $8,736,225 for the second quarter. A statement issued by the company said:

"The company, in presenting its consolidated income account, has excluded from the item of gross earnings the gross revenue derived from the operation of the Peoples Gas building, from the operation of the company's merchandising business and from the operations of all subsidiary companies except the sale of gas. The net income from these sources has, however, been included in net income.

Overcomes Depression.

"The basic nature of the company's business has made it possible to surmount in a large degree the widespread effects of the present industrial depression."

The company reported combined gross earnings of $34,231,229 for the year ended June 30, 1932. Net income for the twelve month period was reported as $6,377,303.

Re-Insurance Corp. Shows Growth in 1st 6 Months

The June 30, 1932, statement of the International Re-Insurance corporation, published yesterday, shows a normal continued growth of the company for the first six months of 1932, during which period gross net income from all sources amounted to $6,488,315.25 and total disbursements amounted to $3,558,315.20, resulting in an excess of income over disbursements of $2,930,000.05.

U. S. Receives Two Billions; Spending Five

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 18.—The total receipts of the federal treasury from all sources during the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1932, were $2,121,223,006 as compared with $3,317,233,493 for the previous year, a decrease of $1,196,005,487.

Total expenditures in the year just past were $5,008,590,305 as compared with $4,219,950,338 in the fiscal year 1931.

That is why, as was shown in an itemized statement issued by the treasury today, the treasury deficit for the last fiscal year totaled $2,885,362,299 as against $902,716,845 for the year before.

Sources of Revenue.

Revenues going into the general fund last year were made up of $1,057,335,853 from income taxes; $503,315,503 from miscellaneous internal revenues; $327,752,391 from customs receipts, and $98,142,094 from miscellaneous receipts. Under that last heading in the treasury table were conspicuous blanks where the 257 millions due on the war debts would have been entered had it not been for the moratorium.

To the general fund were added special fund receipts of $29,179,594 and trust fund receipts aggregating $115,502,568.

War Department Lower.

The war department, which spent approximately 467 millions last year as compared with some 477 millions the year before, and the commerce department which cut its expenditures from 61 millions to 52 millions, were the only two departments to show smaller expenditures in 1932 than in 1931.

The largest tax consumer of them all was the veterans' administration which required $784,841,819 for the year.

Total expenditures by the departments were $2,567,491,292 last year, compared with $2,348,466,923 the year before.

STOCK MARKET EASES LOWER IN DULL TRADE

Wall Street Moves with Caution.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 18. — The stock market slipped off a few points today and closed irregularly lower in a day of sluggish, uninspiring trading, which barely touched the 700,000 share level. It was a disappointing day to those who had expected some sort of a demonstration in celebration of the closing of congress.

There was no indication of any of the traders being in a mood for a buying spree and every one stayed close to shore, easing off their holdings gradually the better to keep afloat.

News to Digest.

When business opened for the week the market had several news items to digest. First there was the actual adjournment of congress, then there was the passage of the relief bill with the promise of presidential approval to be considered. Finally the week-end trade statistics which showed that business was still in the dumps came up for consideration.

All in all the traders decided to con-

PLAN OF READJUSTMENT

To the holders of Certificates representing shares or parts in its

First Mortgage 5½% Sinking Fund Gold Loan

Deposits of more than 50% principal amount of the above Certificates have been made under the Plan of Readjustment. However, the Plan cannot become operative unless and until 80% has been deposited. Certificate holders must immediately deposit their Certificates to avoid default in interest and possible foreclosure—a procedure which, in our opinion, will result in great financial detriment to the holders.

Deposits of Certificates may be made at The New York Trust Company, Mortgagee, 100 Broadway, New York. A copy of the Plan may be obtained from the Secretary of the Committee, upon request.

Since our announcement of July 5, 1932, the undersigned Committee has been and now is actively engaged in investigating the situation of the Company and in discussions with other creditors with a view to formulating a Reorganization Plan. For the present, pending completion of our investigation, the Committee has determined not to ask for the deposit of Debentures.

The Committee, however, has prepared a circular letter dated July 18, 1932, outlining the situation in greater detail and suggests that Debentureholders procure this letter from the Secretary of the Committee.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 6,000; hogs, 19,000; sheep, 11,000.

Cattle and hog prices gave way under pressure yesterday, but the break was not severe in either class. Supplies of the former were largest since May 23, and prices held up well under the burden. Top steers reached $9.60, selling within 15c of the highest spot of last week's market, while the bulk of all steers were within 25@50c of the night point of the year. Prime 1,217 lb Nebraska beeves topped the price list, while numerous sales of 1,000@1,500 lb averages were made at $9.00@9.40. One shipment averaged 1,595 lbs at $9.00.

The larger movement of good to choice grades of beef steers from the corn belt feed lots was attributed to the urge in some parts of the country to capitalize on the recent upturn in cattle prices. Prevailing quotations are $2.00@2.25, or on the average 36 per cent above the low spot in May. Butcher stock ruled weak to unevenly lower with top heifers at $8.00, 50c under the high point of the season. Calves declined 25c for the day.

Show of Life in Hogs.

There was a slight show of life in hogs at the opening and the peak moved up 5c to $5.05 on false strength that later vanished when expected eastern demand failed to materialize. Prices commenced to ease comparatively early in the session and soon losses of 5@10c were uncovered. The general average moved down 5c to $4.50, showing 15c loss since last Friday and 50c loss since Monday of last week. The loss during the last week was about equal to the average weekly gain during the last five weeks. During June prices advanced at the rate of about 80c a week.

Large local packers were the most aggressive in yesterday's hog market. Armour, Swift, and Wilson handled 13,000, including 5,000 mostly good to choice light butchers bought here at $4.80@4.90. The reverse of the hog market trend is attributed to the unsettled condition of the wholesale market for pork. Both the hot weather and the recent sharp advance prices have temporarily turned consumer demand away from pork. Pork loins have dropped to 11@13c per pound in the last few days and packers hope the market will show more stability on the present basis.

Most Lambs at $6.00.

Six dollars was the popular price for good grades of slaughter lambs on yesterday's session, although occasional sales of closely sorted natives reached $6.25@6.50 to city butchers, and several car loads of range lambs were sold at $5.75. Three loads of medium quality Oregon lambs brought $5.00. Action was fair at the opening, but tendency ruled weak to lower toward the finish in sympathy with the trend in other live stock yesterday. Report from the wholesale trade indicated a better demand and improved tone, but available offerings were moderate and large enough to take care of the immediate demands.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 6,000 cattle, 19,000 hogs, and 11,000 sheep, against 6,491 cattle, 18,658 hogs, and 15,741 sheep the previous Tuesday, and 5,521 cattle, 19,560 hogs, and 10,229 sheep, a year ago.

WHEAT STEADIER; BULLISH NEWS IS TAKEN LIGHTLY

Weather Unfavorable in Immense Areas.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat traders were not at all impressed with bullish weather and crop comment from the American and Canadian northwest and from Russia. Nor did relative strength in Liverpool bring in any buying of consequence.

Scattered early hedging pressure carried September wheat off ¾c to 46¾c, a new low for the season, while the July and December equaled the lowest figures of Saturday.

There was not the persistent selling, however, so much in evidence late last week. Closing trades were unchanged to ⅜c lower for the day. July finished at 44¼c, with old September at 46¾@47c, and December, 50¼@50½c.

Failure of buying to develop following the issuance of reports indicating that the spring wheat crop on around 6,000,000 acres in Saskatchewan, or about 25 per cent of the total area in that grain in the Canadian northwest discouraged the bulls.

Little attention paid to reports suggesting drought prevailed in an area involving around 20,000,000 acres in the heaviest producing section in Russia.

Find Heavy Crop Damage.

Crop Observers R. O. Cromwell with Lamson Brothers, H. C. Donovan with Logan & Bryan, and George M. Le Count with Stein, Alstring & Co., sent in reports suggesting that there was little or no probability of a bumper yield in Canada this season, although conditions were much better than last year when the crop was materially below normal. The continued lack of subsoil reserve moisture, coupled with hot and dry weather, is responsible for the deterioration which has occurred of late.

Wheat traders were almost unanimous in their belief that the refusal of the market to respond to bullish reports was due more to the lack of speculative interest rather than to any material pressure. The crest of the winter wheat movement to terminals is regarded as having been witnessed. The 12 leading markets reported 3,457 cars of wheat for the day, against 6,647 cars last year.

Whether the hot weather will cause material damage to the South Dakota spring wheat crop remains to be seen. a representative of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, who drove from Mitchell to Sioux Falls, S. D., late last week, found the greater part of the wheat and other small grain already cut and in shock, while between Mitchell and Chamberlain, S. D., harvesting was expected to be general this week.

While wheat prices in Liverpool are about the lowest known in several hundred years, there was little demand for the cash grain, and the seaboard reported only scattered lots of Manitobas taken for export. The English market closed equal to ¼@⅜c per bu lower, with the October at 52c, or 4⅞c over Chicago at the time. Winnipeg was ½c higher to ½c lower at the close, with October at 56⅛c.

Corn Closes Lower.

Local traders who were on the buying side of corn late last week generally went out of their holdings yesterday and caused a break of ⅝@1⅛c from Saturday's finish. Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down. Buying against bids caused a fractional rally toward the last, with the finish ½@1¼c lower. July was 31c; and September and December, 31⅞@32c at the last.

Complaints of rain being needed were received from a large area and reports of actual deterioration in the outlook for corn came from parts of the south and from Kansas. A decrease of 991,000 bu was shown in the visible supply, with the total now 13,843,000 bu, against 6,921,000 bu last year.

Northwestern hedging pressure was effective in causing a decline to a new low for the season for all deliveries of oats, and the close was ⅝c lower. July finished at 18¼c; September, 18¾c, and December, 21½c. Harvesting of oats is well under way in Iowa, the latter state being somewhat later than South Dakota.

Spreaders sold rye and bought wheat, and the former sold at a new low for the season, closing ¼@⅜c lower, with September, 30¼c, and December, 33⅝c.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR INDIANA CORN CROP

Except for corn, the condition of all Indiana farm crops was below the 10 year average on July 1. The corn crop was 8 points above, says the Indiana monthly crop report, issued by M. M. Justin. High condition of corn is uniform over the state. Color is good and fields generally clean. Acreage is 2 per cent less than last year. Condition of wheat is 8 points below the average, declining 4 points in June, against only 1 point on the average. Indicated yield is 15.5 bu per acre. Stocks of wheat on hand July 1 were 12 per cent of last year's crop, against 4.2 per cent usually. Oat acreage is 6 per cent above last year, with production estimated at 8 per cent less, with an average yield of 27 bu per acre.

RAINFALL LAST WEEK BELOW THE NORMAL

Rainfall last week was below normal practically at all points in the central valleys and absent entirely over the greater part of Missouri, Oklahoma, and Kansas, says Crop Expert B. W. Snow of Bartlett, Frazier company. It was also trifling in Nebraska and in the spring wheat territory. Ohio, northern Illinois and most of Iowa had scattered showers, ranging from light to ample. High temperatures and lack of rainfall in important portions of the corn belt have created some uneasiness as to possible damage to the tassel.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

MEN—SOMETHING UNUSUAL!

THERE IS ALWAYS AN OUTSTANDING SUCCESS THAT DOES NOT NEED TO ASK WHAT THE MARKET IS TODAY OR THE STATE OF GENERAL INDUSTRY.

Under all conditions, in all times, there are some services and products in growing demand, and the unquestioned superiority of our invention is the basis of this offer of free instruction and immediate employment to men living in the North Side or Lake County.

From the first idea back of this remarkable Electrolux invention (not refrigeration) that had its origin in America, but which was developed in Europe, where there are now five large factories supplying these specialties that far outstrip the sale of all others, and with an aggregation of corporations with unlimited resources to insure the abundant development of this work—this business has grown unbrokenly! World leadership has been established, and it is freely predicted that our American factory will outstrip all others.

The founders did the first selling and the first training. Ever since then the most successful salesmen have been trainers of new men, who receive the same practical kind of help, plus the advantage of intensive merchandising research. With direct examples of successful methods to guide you, it does not take long to master the tasks required, but genuine character must be applied. This work calls for manhood expressed in its best terms, for the assumption of responsibility and intelligent, sustained effort. It pays far beyond the ordinary average of success! Our 1932 federal income tax report revealed one group of 63 men whose average cash income for 1931 was $7,486.51 apiece. Typical examples of individual earnings in this group are as follows: $7,885.00; $7,676.50; $7,509.00; $7,401.50, and $7,219.50. Many made more. Yet they began as you would with initial earnings of $125.00 to $200.00 per month, while practicing and learning, although some men qualify for the higher incomes right from the start.

Our successful men come from every trade and profession, therefore past experience is not so important as character and adaptability. We prefer married men between 26 and 45, and they must be neat, of good character, and real workers! There will not be any layoffs. This is not a seasonal business.

A limited number will be selected at this time. But the first step must be an interview, so we can determine how we like you while you decide if you wish this work—there must be accord and understanding from the outset. For personal interview apply Tuesday morning, 9 to 12, at 215 McGrahan Bldg., 1046 Wilson-av.

POSITIONS
IN BEAUTY CULTURE

BECAUSE

State Laws protect those engaged in this profession. But the best positions are available only to Moler Graduates, because of the superior training in Moler's new concise, time saving course that requires only weeks, instead of months. But remember—the regular course is still available at half rates in the 2d school. Earn while attending.

Why pay more than Household's low rate?

The nationally known HOUSEHOLD LOAN PLAN offers cash loans of $300 or less to husbands and wives at reasonable rates.

Loans above $100 and up to $300 are made at a rate less than the usual small loan rate.

If you are keeping house and can make regular monthly payments, you have all the security needed for a Household loan.

Quick service. Strictly confidential. Husband and wife only need sign. No endorsers. 20 months to repay.

Commonwealth Customers—PAY LESS—for LOANS

COMMONWEALTH'S rate on amounts above $100 is substantially lower than the lawful rate usually charged.

THE personal property which nearly every family owns and the signature of husband and wife, enable one to secure any amount up to $300 quickly and easily.

You get the full amount of the loan, and up to 25 months to repay. Interest at the reduced rate is charged only while you keep the money.
